

Guidelines for Managing Conflict of Interest in the Public Service

Why managing conflict of interest matters for governments ?

Ensuring that the integrity of government decision-making is not compromised by public officials' private interests is a growing public concern. New forms of partnership between government and the private and non-profit sectors present new challenges for policy-makers and public managers.

Effectively managing conflict of interest requires a balance. A too-strict approach to controlling private interests may conflict with other rights or be unworkable or deter experienced and competent potential candidates from entering public office or public service. A modern approach to conflict-of-interest policy seeks to strike a balance by: identifying risks; prohibiting unacceptable forms of private interest; raising awareness of the circumstances in which conflicts can arise; and ensuring effective procedures to resolve conflict-of-interest situations.

In OECD member countries, the disclosure of private interests by top decision makers is a common practice. Countries also increasingly require disclosure of private interests by officials in at-risk areas, such as tax and customs officials, procurement officers and financial authorities.
