Managing Disaster Risk In Emerging Economies:

Managing Disaster Risk in Emerging Economies Alcira Kreimer, Margaret Arnold, 2000-01-01 In 1999 natural catastrophes and man made disasters claimed more than 105 000 lives 95 percent of them in the developing world and caused economic losses of around US 100 billion In 1998 the twin disasters of the Yangtze and Hurricane Mitch accounted for two thirds of the US 65 billion loss The geographical areas affected may vary but one constant is that the per capita burden of catastrophic losses is dramatically higher in developing countries To respond to an increased demand to assist disaster recovery programmes the World Bank set up the Disaster Management Facility in 1998 to help provide the Bank with a more rapid and strategic response to disaster emergencies The DMF focuses on risk identification risk reduction and risk sharing transfer the three major topics in this volume The DMF also promotes strategic alliances with key private government multilateral and nongovernmental organisations to ensure the inclusion of disaster risk reduction as a central value of development The most important of these partnerships is the ProVention Consortium launched in February 2000 based on the premise that we must all take responsibility for making the new millennium a safer one

Macroeconomic Risk Management Against Natural Disasters Stefan Hochrainer, 2007-12-14 Looking back in history we conceive the twentieth century as the century of wars Most likely we will conceive the twenty first century as the century of natural catastrophes Wars can be avoided unfortunately it did not happen often in history in contrast most natural disasters are outside human influence However the consequences of disasters can be alleviated by means of risk management For an effective risk management information is needed about i the size of the risk measured by the frequency and intensity of the hazard and ii the degree of vulnerability of the economy and society Stefan Hochrainer's thesis deals with measuring and modeling of both While the physical risk modeling is a well developed area within statistical modeling frequency analysis point processes extreme value theory etc estimating the economic consequences is a more challenging task The author studies economic effects of catastrophes by statistical analysis of macroeconomic data One interesting finding is that disasters can decrease the absolute level of economic performance such as the GDP while keeping growth levels nearly the same at least after some years as in the pre disaster years The boom of new products in the financial markets especially of new derivative instruments has led to new risk hedging instruments such as catastrophe bonds CAT bonds transfer the risk to the market of investors

Stocker, Qin Dahe, 2012-05-28 This Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change Special Report IPCC SREX explores the challenge of understanding and managing the risks of climate extremes to advance climate change adaptation Extreme weather and climate events interacting with exposed and vulnerable human and natural systems can lead to disasters Changes in the frequency and severity of the physical events affect disaster risk but so do the spatially diverse and temporally dynamic patterns of exposure and vulnerability Some types of extreme weather and climate events have increased in frequency or magnitude but populations and assets at risk have also increased with consequences for disaster risk Opportunities for managing risks of weather and climate related disasters exist or can be developed at any scale local to international Prepared following strict IPCC procedures SREX is an invaluable assessment for anyone interested in climate extremes environmental
