History Of Science In The U.S. Clark A. Elliott, 2021-11-18 First published in 1996 The intention of this volume is two fold first to give a chronologically arranged overview of selected data on the history of science in the United States and second to orient the reader to the substantial reference literature and research sources as guidance to further study of the topic The subject areas that are covered include astronomy biology chemistry geology mathematics physics and their related disciplines areas such as anthropology and psychology are covered to a lesser extent Science is the central focus but the content of the work recognizes that the boundaries between subjects or activities are not absolute and certainly not when coverage spans several centuries National Library of Medicine Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.),

Early American Nature Writers Daniel Patterson, 2007-11-30 At a time when the environment is of growing concern to students and general readers nature writing is especially meaningful This book profiles the literary careers of 52 early American nature writers such as John James Audubon Ralph Waldo Emerson Caroline Stansbury Kirkland Thomas Jefferson Henry David Thoreau and Mabel Osgood Wright Each entry is written by an expert contributor and discusses the writer's life and works Entries close with primary and secondary bibliographies and the encyclopedia ends with suggestions for further reading Global warming pollution and other issues have made the environment a topic of constant discussion these days Many environmental concerns were treated by early American nature writers who recognized the beauty of the natural world in an age of commercial expansion Some of the most famous writers of the 18th and 19th centuries wrote about nature and their works are stylistic masterpieces At a time when students are being encouraged to read and write about nonfiction these masterworks of early American nature writing are all the more important This book gives students and general readers a welcome introduction to early American nature writers Natural History in America Andrea J. Branch, 2004 Reading the Roots is an unprecedented anthology of outstanding early writings about American nature a rich influential yet critically underappreciated body of work Rather than begin with Henry David Thoreau who is often identified as the progenitor of American nature writing editor Michael P Branch instead surveys the long tradition that prefigures and anticipates Thoreau and his literary descendants The selections in Reading the Roots describe a diversity of landscapes wildlife and natural phenomena and their authors represent many different nationalities cultural affiliations religious views and ideological perspectives The writings gathered here also range widely in terms of subject rhetorical form and disciplinary approach from promotional tracts and European narratives of contact with Native Americans to examples of scientific theology and romantic nature writing The volume also includes a critical introduction discussing the cultural scientific and literary value of early American nature writing headnotes that contextualize all authors and selections and a substantial bibliography of primary and secondary sources in the field Reading the Roots at last makes early American landscapes and a range of literary responses to them accessible to scholars students and general readers

The Natural Sciences and American Scientists in the Revolutionary Era Katalin Harkanyi,1990-11-26 The years 1760 to 1789 mark the political birth of the United States simultaneously an emancipation of American scientific endeavor from the influence of England and Europe was taking place. This is especially evident in the area of natural sciences: the growing frontiers and population of America opened up vast areas to scientific scrutiny. This extensive bibliography commemorates the scholarship that was published in many forms by and about Revolutionary American science from 1760 through the twentieth century. Part one of Katalin Harkanyi's work provides an overview of the natural sciences in the Revolutionary Era. Comprehensive and general sources are listed in the fields of natural history, botany, zoology, agriculture, and geology; natural philosophy, mathematics, chemistry, astronomy, surveying, engineering, and architecture; and medicine, dentistry, pharmacology, and veterinary medicine. Included are journals, documents, biographies, bibliographies, histories, orations, and even travel journals and diaries which create a framework for the study of Revolutionary American science. The second part of this bibliography is devoted to the scientists themselves: the men and women who wrote partial or specific scientific studies. This section of the book shows that these early Americans were capable of remarkable investigations into the natural world rivaling their European contemporaries. Here are listed the scientists, their extant monographic works, and studies written about them from their age into the twentieth century. Appendices include scientific firsts and special achievements of Revolutionary Americans and a list of scientists arranged by discipline. This book will be a useful guide for historians and scientists as well as inquiring general readers who want to know more about the early growth of American science.

Making American Nature: Scientific Narratives of Origin and Order in Visual and Literary Conceptions of Race in the Early American Republic Alicia M. Gamez, 1999 Eclipse of Empires Patricia Jane Roylance, 2013-10 This book analyzes the nineteenth-century American fascination with what the author calls narratives of imperial eclipse: texts that depict the surpassing of one great civilization by another. The central claim in this book is that historical episodes of imperial eclipse—for example, Incan Peru yielding to Spain or the Ojibway to the French—heightened the concerns of many American writers about specific intranational social problems plaguing the nation at the time: race, class, gender, religion, and economics. Bulletin of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, 1929 Recent Publications in Natural History, 1986 The Descendants of Mathew Martine Forde Vol I Generations 1-8 - Unabridged With Sources, Black Itinerants of the Gospel G. Hodges, 2016-04-30 John Jea b. 1773 and George White 1764 c. 1830 were two of the earliest African American autobiographers writing nearly a half-century before Frederick Douglass published his famous narrative chronicling his experiences as a slave, a freedman, and an ardent abolitionist. Jea and White represent an earlier generation of African Americans that were born into slavery but granted their freedom shortly after American independence in the 1780s. Both men chose to fight against slavery from the pulpit as itinerant Methodist ministers in the North. Methodism's staunch anti-slavery stance acceptance of African American congregants and widespread use of itinerant preachers enhanced black religious practices and services in the late eighteenth century and the nineteenth century Graham Hodges substantial introduction to the book places these two narratives into historical context and highlights several key themes including slavery in the North the struggle for black freedom after the Revolution and the rise of African American Christianity America, History and Life ,2004 Provides historical coverage of the United States and Canada from prehistory to the present Includes information abstracted from over 2 000 journals published worldwide
