Screening Nature and Nation Michael D. Clemens, 2022-04-27 The stunning portrayals of the Canadian landscape in the documentaries produced by the National Film Board of Canada not only influenced cinematic language but shaped our perception of the environment. In the early days of the organization, nature films produced by the NFB supported the Canadian government's nation building project and show the state as an active participant in the cultural construction of the land. By the mid 1960s, however, films like Cree Hunters of Mistassini and Death of a Legend were asking provocative questions about the state's vision of nature. Filmmakers like Boyce Richardson and Bill Mason began to centre the experiences of First Nations people, contest the notion that nature should be transformed for economic gain and challenge the idea that the North is a wild and empty landscape bereft of civilization. Author Michael Clemens describes how films produced by the NFB broadened the ecological imagination of Canadians over time and ultimately inspired an environmental movement.

In Nature's Name Barbara T. Gates, 2002-04. From the late eighteenth to the early twentieth century, hundreds of British women wrote about and drew from nature. Some like the beloved children's author Beatrix Potter, who produced natural history about hedgehogs as well as fiction about rabbits, are still familiar today. But others have all but disappeared from view. Barbara Gates recovers these lost works and prints them alongside little known pieces by more famous authors like Potter's field notes on hedgehogs, reminding us of better known stories that help set the others in context. The works contained in this volume are as varied as the women who produced them. They include passionate essays on the protection of animals, vivid accounts of travel and adventure from the English seashore to the Indian Alps, poetry and fiction, and marvelous tales of nature for children. Special features of the book include a detailed chronology placing each selection in its historical and literary context, biographical sketches of each author's life and works, a comprehensive bibliography of primary and secondary literature, and over sixty illustrations. An ideal introduction to women's powerful and diverse responses to the natural world, In Nature's Name will be treasured by anyone interested in natural history, women, or Victorian and Edwardian Britain.

Decolonizing Nature William Adams, Martin Mulligan, 2012-04-27. British imperialism was almost unparalleled in its historical and geographical reach, leaving a legacy of entrenched social transformation in nations and cultures in every part of the globe. Colonial annexation and government were based on an all-encompassing system that integrated and controlled political, economic, social, and ethnic relations and required a similar annexation and control of natural resources and nature itself. Colonial ideologies were expressed not only in the progressive exploitation of nature but also in the emerging discourses of conservation. At the start of the 21st century, the conservation of nature is of undiminished importance in post-colonial societies, yet the legacy of colonial thinking endures. What should conservation look like today, and what indeed, whose ideas should it be based upon? Decolonizing Nature explores the influence of the colonial legacy on contemporary conservation and on ideas about the relationships between people, politics, and nature in countries and cultures that were once part of the British Empire. It locates the historical development of the theory and practice of conservation at both the periphery and the centre firmly within the context of this legacy and considers its significance today It highlights the present and future challenges to conservationists of contemporary global neo colonialism The contributors to this volume include both academics and conservation practitioners They provide wide ranging and insightful perspectives on the need for and practical ways to achieve new forms of informed ethical engagement between people and nature

Nature's Mirror Mary Anne Andrei,2020-11-20 It may be surprising to us now but the taxidermists who filled the museums zoos and aquaria of the twentieth century were also among the first to become aware of the devastating effects of careless human interaction with the natural world Witnessing firsthand the decimation caused by hide hunters commercial feather collectors whalers big game hunters and poachers these museum taxidermists recognized the existential threat to critically endangered species and the urgent need to protect them The compelling exhibits they created as well as the scientific field work popular writing and lobbying they undertook established a vital leadership role in the early conservation movement for American museums that persists to this day Through their individual research expeditions and collective efforts to arouse demand for environmental protections this remarkable cohort including William T Hornaday Carl E Akeley and several lesser known colleagues created our popular understanding of the animal world and its fragile habitats For generations of museum visitors they turned the glass of an exhibition case into a window on nature and a mirror in which to reflect on our responsibility for its conservation
