The NBER Macroeconomics Annual 2021 presents research central issues in contemporary macroeconomics Robert Hall and Marianna Kudlyak examine unemployment dynamics during economic recoveries They present new empirical findings and explore models in which the labor market gradually draws down the stock of unemployed workers in the aftermath of a downturn Titan Alon Sena Coskun Matthias Doepke David Koll and Mich le Tertilt analyze the relative decline in employment of women during the COVID 19 pandemic and the associated global recession They show that increased childcare needs which fell more heavily on women and differences in occupations both contributed In the case of the US however each of these factors account for less than 20% of the gender gap in hours worked during the pandemic Richard Rogerson and Johanna Wallenius study the employment rates of older workers in OECD countries over the last forty years An expansion of institutions incentivizing retirement concurrent with negative aggregate shocks between 1970 and 1995 led to falling employment rates This trend started to reverse in the mid 1990s when many of these institutions such as public pension programs were cut back Michael Barnett William Brock and Lars Peter Hansen explore the consequences of risk ambiguity and model misspecification in climate policy design They consider carbon emissions pricing and the effects of different sources of uncertainty such as future information about environmental damage uncertainties in carbon and temperature dynamics and damage functions and the role of future green technologies on policy design Michael Kremer Jack Willis and Yang You present new evidence suggesting a steady trend toward income convergence across countries since the late 1980s They find convergence in various determinants of economic growth across countries and a flattening of the relationship between growth and these determinants The paper challenges theories of growth arising after earlier rejections of the neoclassical growth model NBER Macroeconomics Annual 1986 Stanley Fisher,1986 NBER Macroeconomics Annual 2018 Martin Eichenbaum,Jonathan A. Parker,2019-08-05 This volume contains six studies on current topics in macroeconomics The first shows that while assuming rational expectations is unrealistic a finite horizon forward planning model can yield results similar to those of a rational expectations equilibrium The second explores the aggregate risk of the U S financial sector and in particular whether it is safer now than before the 2008 financial crisis The third analyzes factorless income output that is not measured as capital or labor income Next a study argues that the financial crisis increased the perceived risk of a very bad economic and financial outcome and explores the propagation of large rare shocks The next paper documents the substantial recent changes in the manufacturing sector and the decline in employment among prime aged Americans since 2000 The last paper analyzes the dynamic macroeconomic effects of border adjustment taxes
