predominately rich states This book takes the opposite approach it investigates how politics is practiced in the smallest states where hyper personalization has always been a ubiquitous feature of political life It optimistically finds that hyper personalized democracy can actually persist against all odds but also cautions that political practices in small states are often markedly different to larger states Oxford Studies in Democratization is a series for scholars and students of comparative politics and related disciplines Volumes concentrate on the comparative study of the democratization process that accompanied the decline and termination of the cold war The geographical focus of the series is primarily Latin America the Caribbean Southern and Eastern Europe and relevant experiences in Africa and Asia The series editor is Laurence Whitehead Senior Research Fellow Nuffield College University of Oxford Pacific Power? Joanne Wallis, 2017-07-17 Australia is much larger and has significantly more military and economic power than its Pacific Island neighbours As a result it is frequently described as having a natural right to lead in the region Yet Australia has found it difficult to effectively influence Pacific Island states in pursuit of its strategic interests It provides the definitive account of how and how effectively Australia has sought to influence Pacific Island states in pursuit of its strategic interests since 1975 the year that Papua New Guinea Australia s former colonial territory gained independence Informed by interviews with key decision makers Pacific Power analyses why Australia has had difficulty exercising influence in the Pacific Islands and identifies how Australia can more effectively influence Pacific Island states in pursuit of its strategic interests and how Australia can present itself more as a Pacific partner than power Demographic and Social Change in the Island Nations of the Pacific Dennis A.
