investigates the remote forest and its urban core as two poles of a regional city. This city consisted of a far reaching network of spaces produced as company owners and workers arrayed men and machines to extract resources and create human commodities from the region's rich natural environment. Combining labor, urban, industrial and social history, City of Wood employs a variety of sources including contemporary newspaper articles, novels and photographs to explore the architectural landscape of lumber from backwoods logging camps and company towns in the woods to busy lumber docks and the homes of workers and owners in San Francisco. By imagining the redwood lumber industry as a single community spread across multiple sites, a City of Wood Buckley demonstrates how capitalist resource extraction links different places along the production value chain. The result is a paradigm shift in architectural history that focuses not just on the evolution of individual building design across time but also on economic connections that link the center and periphery across space.

Located on the north shore of Fidalgo Island in Washington State's Puget Sound, Anacortes was founded by railroad surveyor Amos Bowman and named in honor of his wife Anna Curtis. They promoted Anacortes as the New York of the West. Thousands of years prior to the 1890s boom and bust, Fidalgo Island was and still is home to the Samish and the Swinomish tribes. White settlers arriving in the 1850s established farms and eventually wood mills, salmon canneries and a vital downtown waterfront transforming Anacortes into the salmon canning capital of the world by the early 20th century. Japanese and Chinese cannery workers and Croatian and Scandinavian fishermen were among the many immigrants who brought their unique ways to the island. As a port town, Anacortes retained an open and adventuresome spirit attracting new arrivals and visitors with the stunning natural beauty of the Northwest frontier. Commercial fishermen still ply local waters alongside a thriving maritime industry, whale watching, ecotourism and a tradition of creative festivity.
