(Non)referentiality in Conversation Michael C. Ewing, Ritva Laury, 2024-08-01 Although there is a large literature on referentiality going back to at least the nineteenth and early twentieth century much of this early work is based on constructed data and most of it is on English The chapters in this volume contribute to a growing body of work that examines referentiality through naturalistic data in context Taking an interactional approach to non referentiality contributors to this volume ask how participants talk in real time about persons and things as individuals or as categories and what distinguishes referential from nonreferential specific from nonspecific and generic from nongeneric Crucially we ask whether these distinctions even matter to participants in conversation and if they do what the evidence for that would be Contributors investigate these issues using data from conversational interaction in a variety of social contexts including between close friends and family to more casual acquaintances in service encounters and between adults and children and in a range of languages English Finnish French Indonesian Japanese and Mandarin Collectively the chapters develop insights showing that reference is often fluid dynamic and indeterminate that referential indeterminacy is typically unproblematic for participants that shifts in referentiality tend to be tied to specific social goals and that reference and referentiality emerge dialogically and interactionally

Understanding Conversational Joking Nadine Thielemann, 2020-06-11 This book examines the diverse forms of conversational humor with the help of examples drawn from casual interactions among Russian speakers It argues that neither an exclusively discourse analytic perspective on the phenomenon nor an exclusively cognitive one can adequately account for conversational joking Instead the work advocates reconciling these two perspectives in order to describe such humor as a form of cognitive and communicative creativity by means of which interlocutors convey additional meanings and imply further interpretive frames Accordingly in order to analyze cognition in interaction it introduces a discourse semantic framework which complements mental spaces and blending theory with ideas from discourse analysis On the one hand this enables both the emergent and interactive character and the surface features of conversational joking to be addressed On the other it incorporates into the analysis those normally backgrounded cognitive processes responsible for the additional meanings emerging from and communicated by jocular utterances
