
ECUMENICAL ECCLESIOLOGY IN THE AFRICAN CONTEXT: TOWARDS A VIEW OF THE CHURCH AS UBUNTU

Teddy C Sakupapa
University of the Western Cape

Abstract

This purpose of this essay is to provide an overview of approaches to ecclesiology in the African context with specific reference to various institutional expressions of the ecumenical movement. While wider ecumenical ecclesiological debates have pondered on the distinctive nature of the church, African contributions have focused on the embeddedness of the church in the African context with its evolving cultures and social context. Decrying the split between what the church is (read: ecclesiology) and what it does (read: ethics) as a false dichotomy within the African context, I will argue for a critical appropriation of the sub-Saharan African non-dualistic notion of ubuntu as apposite for articulating an ecumenical ecclesiology within the African context. This is buttressed by the connotations of communality, communion and interrelatedness that ubuntu carries in addition to its resonance with other concepts in African thought, such as vital participation and vital force.

Key Words: African Theology; African Ecclesiology; Church as Family; Communion Ecclesiology; Diakonia; Ecumenical Ecclesiology; Koinonia; Trinity; Ubuntu

Introduction

African theologians operating within the paradigm of inculturation have employed a variety of metaphors to describe the church within the African context, such as clan (Waliggo, 1998), family (Oduyoye, 1991; Onwubiko, 2001; Chukwu, 2011), and community (Omenyo, 2000). Within African liberation and reconstruction theologies, ecclesiology has often been framed in sociological terms. More generally, African contributions to ecclesiology have typically responded to several aspects of the African social context. This is understandable given the consideration that churches as historical communities are indeed culturally and historically grounded and conditioned. As an attempt at an African contextual ecumenical reflection on the church, this contribution will offer an appraisal of selected proposals for an African ecclesiology in African ecumenical discourse in general and in the African theologies of inculturation, liberation and reconstruction specifically. On this basis, I will argue for an approach to African ecumenical ecclesiology that does justice to the integral relationship between ecclesiology and ethics. I share the conviction that the relationship between these two crucial ecumenical concerns can hardly be overlooked in any meaningful reflection on ecumenical ecclesiology within the African context. This contribution will therefore proceed from an African ecumenical vantage point.

Antecedents of Ecumenical Ecclesiology

Dominant historical understandings of what the church is in sub-Saharan Africa reflect a heritage of missionary Christianity and its concomitant western interpretations. Most churches that were established as a result of the 19th century missionary movement were

Provisional Churches Christian Duquoc, 1986 Koinonia and the Quest for an Ecumenical Ecclesiology Lorelei F. Fuchs, 2008 The word koinonia has gained prominence in recent ecumenical discussions In this original and substantial work Lorelei Fuchs proposes the theological idea of koinonia commonly translated as communion or fellowship as the key to moving fractured churches toward a future unity Fuchs challenges churches to move beyond mere dialogue and to apply ecumenical insights at the local level She begins by relating the exegetical meaning of koinonia to its ecumenical meaning tracing the place of koinonia both within the churches and between the churches She then examines the concept of koinonia in the extensive and fruitful dialogues that have taken place between Lutherans Anglicans and Roman Catholics finally articulating a symbolic competence for communionality that provides a rich and workable way forward for church unity at all levels Encompassing the latest in ecumenical thought Koinonia and the Quest for an Ecumenical Ecclesiology provides a broad thoughtful framework for realizing Christ's prayer that all may be one so that the world may believe The Trinity and Ecumenical Church Thought William C. Ingle-Gillis, 2016-12-05 Some hundred years from inception the ecumenical movement is stagnating William C Ingle Gillis argues that the problem lies in modern ecumenism's treatment of denominational Churches as provisional entities requiring reunion to be more fully Christ's Body In a work unique both to ecumenical studies and to trinitarian theology the author redefines ecclesial life from the premise that God's essence is personhood in communion and that the ultimate calling of human persons is to share as fully in the divine life as Christ himself Concluding that the Churches are by the Spirit's action a tangible dynamic event wherein God makes visible his ongoing reconciliation of the world to himself Ingle Gillis argues that the Churches true life lies in coming together rather than being together This conclusion places ecumenism at the heart of Church life and witness The Church and the Churches G. R. Evans, 2002-04-04 Individual churches today have a lively ecumenical consciousness but they often express anxieties about what will become of them in a future united Church Questions are being asked about the goal of such unity In this book G R Evans asks what we mean by a church and how different Christian bodies have understood the way a church is related to the Church She surveys the nature of unity and what the fullness of the communion being reached for might consist of the place of diversity of faith and order in a united Church or ways in which there can go on being many churches in one Church and how they might be related to it and questions about the common structures one Church would need and the way in which it could come to think and act as a single body of Christ The book concludes with a discussion of the concept of communion which now looks very hopeful ecumenically as a guide to the way forward William Temple and Church Unity Edward Loane, 2016-09-29 This book evaluates William Temple's theology and his pursuit of church unity It exposes a number of paradoxes and conflicts that have generally gone under appreciated in assessments of Temple William Temple was one of the most outstanding leaders of the early ecumenical movement In many ways his ecumenical efforts provided a paradigm others have looked to and followed Through detailed analysis of primary sources this study sheds light on several behind the scenes conflicts Temple experienced as he worked toward church unity Edward Loane explores the foundation of Temple s work by analyzing the philosophy and theology that underpinned and fueled it The book also exposes the tensions between Temple s denominational allegiance and his ecumenical convictions a tension that in some ways undermined his work for reunion This book reveals issues that contemporary Christians need to grapple with as they seek to further church unity

Ecumenism, Christian Origins and the Practice of Communion Nicholas Sagovsky, 2000-05-04 The theology of communion or Koinonia has been at the centre of the ecumenical movement for more than thirty years It is central to the self understanding of the Anglican Roman Catholic and Orthodox Churches and has been prominent in the work of the World Council of Churches This book based on the 1996 Hulsean Lectures examines the significance of Koinonia for contemporary ecumenical theology tracing the development of contemporary understanding in critical engagement with the thoughts of Plato Aristotle the Hebrew Scriptures the New Testament the Cappadocian Fathers and Augustine In each case reflection on community life is related to actual communities in which texts were produced The importance of conflict and the place of politics for the Koinonia that constitutes the Christian churches is a major theme throughout Communion is seen as a gift to be received and a discipline to be cultivated in the continuing practice of ecumenism

Ecumenism and the Call to Catholic Learning Paul Murray, 2010-05-06 This volume proposes a fresh strategy for ecumenical engagement Receptive Ecumenism that is fitted to the challenges of the contemporary context and has already been internationally recognised as making a distinctive and important new contribution to ecumenical thought and practice Beyond this the volume tests and illustrates this proposal by examining what Roman Catholicism in particular might fruitfully learn from its ecumenical others Challenging the tendency for ecumenical studies to ask whether explicitly or implicitly What do our others need to learn from us this volume presents a radical challenge to see ecumenism move forward into action by highlighting the opposite question What can we learn with integrity from our others This approach is not simply ecumenism as shared mission or ecumenism as problem solving and incremental agreement but ecumenism as a vital long term programme of individual communal and structural conversion driven like the Gospel that inspires it by the promise of conversion into greater life and flourishing The aim is for the Christian traditions to become more not less than they currently are by learning from or receiving of each other s gifts The 32 original essays that have been written for this unique volume explore these issues from a wide variety of denominational and disciplinary perspectives drawing together ecclesiologists professional ecumenists sociologists psychologists and organizational experts Risking the Church
