Mental Illness Joan Busfield,2011-11-07 The author evaluates critiques of the concept of mental illness and of the way its expanding boundaries now define a far wider range of mental states experiences and activities as pathological. Arguing that these boundaries need to be restricted, the author contends that many of the phenomena identified as mental illness are normal reactions to life's difficulties and that while individuals may need support, it is not appropriate or helpful for such phenomena to be treated as indicative of mental disorder. Other important topics covered include the way mental illness is measured, its distribution across populations and over time, and the different types of care provided for those with identified mental illness.

Assessing Forensic Mental Health Need Andrea Cohen, Nigel Eastman, 2000. Mentally disordered offenders (MDOs) have dominated the recent political agenda for mental health care, emphasised by cases such as those of Christopher Clunis and Michael Stone. Yet successive governments have constrained the development of all health and social services by the requirement that they must be demonstrated as capable of benefiting those to whom they are applied. This book analyses the development of government policy for services for MDOs since the important Butler report in 1975 and provides a theoretical framework for adjudging research which purports to demonstrate a need and outcome. Finally, it emphasises the subjective and value-laden nature of all needs assessments and their interpretation and poses the crucial questions of whose need it is that we address through MDO services: those of the patient or of society. This book will be valuable to clinicians and researchers working in mental health services, policy makers, service commissioners and managers.

Features: An analysis of the history of the MDO policy in relation to needs assessment pre and post the important Reed Report. A methodological framework for needs assessment of MDOs. Critical appraisal of alternative definitions of needs and of related concepts. Critical analysis of the application of needs assessment methods. A review of research relevant to needs assessment for MDOs. Needs in relation to outcome. An analysis of recent policy development related to MDO services.

Jed Boardman,Helen Killaspy,Gillian Mezey,2022-12-08 People with mental health conditions are among the most socially excluded groups in society Mental health conditions are influenced by the social environment which in turn shapes our social and cultural responses to the people who experience them Much of what mental health practitioners do is essentially social and the effects of their interventions are hampered by the marginalised status of many of the people that they see This book documents the ways in which people with mental health conditions are excluded from participating in society and offers some pointers as to how this may be reversed It highlights the need to reduce mental health inequalities and to consider the importance of material inequalities and social injustices faced by people experiencing mental ill health Whilst the challenges are considerable and the solutions wide ranging mental health practitioners can play a significant role in facilitating the social inclusion of those with mental health conditions Public Mental Health: Global Perspectives
