Dark, 2016-10-06 Since the end of the Cold War analysts of international politics have given much greater attention to issues of change It has become increasingly clear to specialists from many fields that any understanding of large scale political change must encompass far longer timescales than has been usual in the study of world politics and must incorporate multi disciplinary perspectives This book evaluates and draws on relevant theoretical approaches from other disciplines such as sociology economics geography history anthropology and archaeology as well as evolutionary theory and the mathematical study of complexity Using an epistemological framework Dark sets out a theory of long term world political change the theory of Macrodynamics This is then applied to historical anthropological and archaeological data to explain the changing forms of political organization from the earliest human societies to the late twentieth century. The resulting analysis is a reinterpretation of the processes of global political change in the past and present This in turn opens new areas of enquiry in the study of international relations and has profound implications for how we understand the changing world of today International Relations, 6E V N Khanna, International Relations covers the subject from the historical perspective from the eve of the First World War to the end of the Cold War and beyond This book is divided into two sections the first deals with the theoretical perspectives while the second provides an historical overview of events These include the two World Wars problems faced in peace making system of alliances search for security Nazism and Fascism rise of communism the arms race and disarmament the Cold War and its end Non Aligned Movement and the emergence of regional organizations.
