Man Who Photographed The World:

The Man who Photographed the World Burton Holmes, 1977 In an era before television and air travel Burton Holmes The Travelogue Man as he called himself was for many people the only window on the world Single handed he brought the glamour and excitement of foreign lands to Americans unable to go themselves That excitement is re created in this magnificent album of his photographs accompanied by his own writings Burton Holmes purchased his first camera in 1883 and began a love affair with photography that lasted throughout his 88 years Almost equaling his passion to capture life on film was a desire to travel to seek out and record novel experiences In order to pay for his journeys Holmes created the travelogue a spectacle in words and pictures that played to full houses in city after city attracting both sophisticates and provincials When Burton Holmes came to town usually engaging the best theater or concert hall for a week at a time everyone went to see his magical slides and hear his enthralling lectures His travelogues were the grand events of the season This book shows why no mere sunsets over Pago Pago his photographs are powerful observations of life on the move of people and drama of history in the making In his long career he traveled to nearly every country on the globe He rode the Trans Siberian Railroad across Russia while they were still laying the track He was in Naples in 1906 and recorded Vesuvius most devastating eruption in modern times He covered the building of the Panama Canal the Russo Japanese War the Boxer Rebellion in China Holmes not only brought these and other events to American audiences he even presented them in color In the 1890s his 3 1/2 x 4 1/2 inch glass slides were exquisitely hand painted in watercolor by a team of Japanese artists In later years the painting was done in the United States by artists personally trained by Holmes work so fine that single hair ermine brushes had to be used The results were astonishingly realistic as can be seen in the full color reproductions For the travel buff the photographer the historian this is a book to delight the eye and mind
