Management And Regional Science For Economic Development:

Management and Regional Science for Economic Development Manas Chatterji, 1982-11-30 The greatest challenge facing mankind today is the immense disparity in the levels of income among people in different parts of the globe The growth rate of income of the poor countries is consistently far below the rate of the advanced industrialized nations Due to low income and a high propensity to consume there is very little left in these countries for investment A major portion of the resources available is devoted to military expenditures This continual decline in the standard of living coupled with poverty and unemployment will lead to social and political upheaval in these countries which affects developed countries Because of high capacity and low population growth the market of the developed countries is already saturated To maintain the high standard of living in the developed countries it is necessary to have a strong and stable developing world It is gratifying to see that both groups of countries see the need for peaceful economic growth however the amount of cooperation between countries and the material help from the developed countries are far from satisfactory The economic and social scientists have investigated the best way to achieve the transformation from a poverty ridden condition to a decent existence Their studies have proceeded in two different directions One is a more descriptive historical analysis and the other is theoretical model building Although these studies have achieved a relatively high level of perfection one significant factor is sometimes missing

Development Studies in Regional Science Zhenhua Chen, William M. Bowen, Dale Whittington, 2020-02-21 This book examines major policy and planning issues in development studies from the regional science perspective. It investigates questions such as: How are communities able to deal with uncertainties raised by conflicts, technology, and external shocks in the process of development? How can nations achieve sustainable development in terms of resource allocation and management? How can developing countries improve their economic competitiveness while maintaining the objectives of equitable and coordinated growth among different regions? Using case studies that focus on different subfields like infrastructure, environment, data science, sustainability, and resilience, the book is organized in three parts. Part I clarifies fundamental issues regarding development studies and regional science in general, while Part II includes several case studies that address development-related opportunities and challenges with a focus on Asian countries. Lastly, Part III offers a global perspective and explores development experiences from countries throughout the world. Featuring contributions by leading academics and practitioners working at various organizations linked to international development and including multidisciplinary analyses, the book appeals to students who are interested in development studies and regional science. It also offers planners and policymakers fresh insights into regional economic development. Principles of Regional Science

Zheng Wang, 2017-10-17 This book summarizes the research findings in regarding a region as a rational and abstract concept and explores the principles of regional science. Focusing on location theory, spatial dynamics, and regional evolution theory, it stresses that the region as a scientific concept is an essential abstract of an economic entity of a place. While it introduces a number of case studies, the content is general and universal rather than specific. Beginning with location theory, the basis of regional science, it explains how regions breed their own characteristics as economic entities against a background of place. For example, it discusses the location theory of the tourism industry and analyzes issues of facility location and R D industry location theory. The second part of the book addresses interactions with the spatial dynamics, including the dynamic mechanism of regions against a background of space. Spatial dynamics, which includes concepts from statistical physics, provides insights into the dynamic mechanism of aggregation, diffusion, and industrial clustering in regional science as well as in geography and economics. The book then describes regional dynamics as a development of spatial dynamics. REGION is completely independent as a research object and is no longer part of spatial dynamics. This book also discusses in detail regions as the dynamic characteristics of the economy or the basic characteristics of a certain place and examines the theory of regional evolution. It argues that regions are evolution and irreversible features of development with path dependence, which are the characteristics of a region that differ from general economic phenomena. This book by Professor Zheng Wang is outstanding. Its focus on Regional Science will open this area up to a wide variety of theoretical and applied researchers. I recommend the work without reservations. It covers critically important principles in the field and should be read and used by students, faculty, and applied researchers doing policy analysis. I can see this as an important handbook and reference work as
