Management Of Infection In Oncology Patients:

Management of Infection in Oncology Patients John R. Wingard, Raleigh A. Bowden, 2003-07-10 This text presents a comprehensive review of the range of infectious complications that can arise in oncology patients as a result of their underlying malignancy as well as from their treatment The first section considers the effects of different treatment strategies on various host defenses The second section describes the various infectious syndromes and addresses types of pathogens shifts over time and changing diagnostic considerations The final section discusses adjunctive measures that can prevent and assist antimicrobial agents in infection control The book offers practical advice for practicing oncologists hematologists and infectious disease specialists Management of Infectious Complication in Cancer Patients Gary A. Noskin, 2007-11-23

Infection is a major cause of morbidity and mortality in patients with neoplastic disease because of compromised host defenses These defects result in an increased risk of infection and its complications The nature of the underlying malignancy the immunodeficiencies associated with it and the treatments directed against it are all important determinants of infection In recent years the introduction of more intensive chemotherapeutic regimes and the widespread use of bone marrow and peripheral stem cell transplantation have changed the pattern of infection in many patients Furthermore the increasing use of central venous access devices and antimicrobial prophylaxis has changed the epidemiology of infection in these patients as well The goal of this volume in the Cancer Treatment and Research series is to emphasize that while the management of infection in cancer patients is common it is constantly changing With the increasing complexity of these patients optimal management requires a multidisciplinary approach Ultimately it is hoped that this book will assist clinicians in the diagnosis management and prevention of infection in order to optimize care for patients with cancer Managing Infections in Patients With Hematological Malignancies Michael Kleinberg, 2009-10-20 Managing infections that complicate care of neutropenic patients with leukemia and hematopoietic stem cell recipients has become a distinct specialty In Managing Infections in Patients with Hematological Malignancies the authors and editor draw on their extensive expertise while providing a roadmap for hematologists to efficiently manage the complex infections within their patients The first section of the text reviews viral bacterial and fungal pathogens and provides brief descriptions of the microbes and diseases they cause in patients with hematological malignancies The second section is devoted to management of infections in patients with the different underlying hematological malignancies while the third addresses several important topics that are often ignored in most books about infections and hematological malignancies Managing Infections in Hematological Malignancies is a useful tool for all clinicians and practicing hematologists who treat individual patients and aspire to build stronger infectious diseases programs within their respective cancer centers Management of Infections in the Immunocompromised

Clinical Approach to Infection in the Compromised Host R. Rubin,2013-11-11 Infection in the Compromised Host has become a classic chapter in textbooks devoted to infectious diseases and internal medicine The numbers of compromised hosts are increasing in the era of modern medicine because of our expanded capabilities to deal with difficult diseases especially neoplasms As a consequence microbiologic complications related to the intensive care administered to these patients are increasing as well Under these circumstances not only does the underlying illness create conditions favorable for the development of unusual infections but often the therapy contributes to the acquisition of potential pathogens that turn into agents responsible for severe and frequently fatal disease Granulocytopenia and immunosuppression have been the two key factors in predisposing patients with cancer and other serious diseases to severe bacterial infections Colonization by hospital acquired pathogens and breaks in the anatomic barriers as a result of disease or medical intervention have contributed to the high incidence of infectious diseases in these patients Although there is some overlap between the types of infection in granulocytopenic and immunosuppressed hosts each of these clinical entities has distinctive features that justify considering them separately reserving the term immunocompromised hosts only when referring to patients who are predisposed to opportunistic infections For about two decades infections in granulocytopenic patients have attracted the attention of clinicians because they represent a model for the study of antimicrobial drugs in hosts deprived of an essential element of defense against bacterial infection that is an adequate number of normally functioning granulocytes
