

Natural resource federalism: Preferences versus connectivity for patchy resources

Christopher Costello* and Daniel Kaffine†

Abstract

We examine the efficiency of centralized versus decentralized management of spatially-connected renewable resources when users have heterogeneous preferences for conservation vs. extraction. Resource mobility induces a spatial externality, while spatial preference heterogeneity drives a wedge between users' privately optimal extraction rates. We first address these market failures analytically and show that the first is most efficiently handled with centralized planning while the second is best tackled with decentralized management. Except in special cases, neither approach will be first best, but which arises as second best depends on the relative strength of preference heterogeneity versus spatial mobility of the resource. We illustrate the theory, and test its robustness, with a numerical example.

Keywords: renewable resources, federalism, spatial externalities, property rights

Natural Resource Revenues A Test Of Federalism:

Natural Resource Revenues Anthony Scott, 1976 Debate on the question of who should receive the surplus revenue generated by natural resource exploitation Ottawa or the provinces is usually carried on in terms of history politics custom law social values and environmental considerations This collection of essays presents analyses of the question from the economist's point of view The essays fall into three groups In the first of these the authors examine the taxation of the mining and energy industries and show how the method of taxation chosen by different levels of government federal or provincial may be non neutral distorting private output and timing decisions The second group consists of careful case studies of the effects of particular natural resource taxation measures the third focuses directly on the question of provincial and federal entitlement to resource revenues Although arguments are advanced for linking the right to tax to the responsibility for management and control at present vested in the provinces most of the contributors would agree that the provinces should be regarded as stewards and bailiffs not landlords as rent collectors and managers not rentiers and owners The
