The Nature of Magic Susan Greenwood, 2020-06-03 This book examines how and why practitioners of nature religion Western witches druids shamans seek to relate spiritually with nature through magical consciousness Magic and consciousness are concepts that are often fraught with prejudice and ambiguity respectively Greenwood develops a new theory of magical consciousness by arguing that magic ultimately has more to do with the workings of the human mind in terms of an expanded awareness than with socio cultural explanations She combines her own subjective insights gained from magical practice with practitioners in depth accounts and sustained academic theory on the process of magic She also tracks magical consciousness in philosophy myth folklore story telling and the hi tech discourse of postmodernity and asks important questions concerning nature religion's environmental credentials such as whether it is inherently ecological as many of its practitioners claim

Monsters in Society Rebecca Merkelbach, 2019-11-05 Dragons giants and the monsters of learned discourse are rarely encountered in the Sagas of Icelanders and therefore the general teratological focus on physical monstrosity yields only limited results when applied to them This however does not equal an absence of monstrosity it only means that monstrosity is conceived of differently This book shifts the view of monstrosity from the physical to the social accounting for the unique social circumstances presented in the slendingas gur and demonstrating how closely interwoven the social and the monstrous are in this genre Employing literary and cultural theory as well as anthropological and historical approaches it reads the monsters of the slendingas gur in their literary and socio cultural context demonstrating that they are not distractions from feud and conflict but that they are in fact an intrinsic part of the genre's re imagining of the past for the needs of the present
