American Indian Painting of the Southwest and Plains Areas Dorothy Dunn,1968 For the Southwestern Indians painting was a natural part of all the arts and ceremonies through which they expressed their perception of the universe and their sense of identification with nature It was wholly lacking in individualism included no portraits singled out no artists But the roving life of the Plains Indians produced a more personal art Their painted hides were records of an individual s exploits intended not to supplicate or appease unearthly powers but to gain prestige within the tribe and proclaim invincibility to an enemy Plains painting served man to man relationships Southwestern painting those of man to nature man to God Such characteristics and the ways they persist in contemporary Indian painting are documented by the 157 examples Miss Dunn has chosen to illustrate her story Thirty three of these pictures in full color are here published for the first time

Adopting the Melody of Expression: An Emotional Symphony within Paintings Of The Southwest

In a world used by displays and the ceaseless chatter of quick interaction, the melodic splendor and emotional symphony produced by the written word often diminish into the back ground, eclipsed by the constant noise and disturbances that permeate our lives. But, located within the pages of Paintings Of The Southwest a charming literary treasure full of organic feelings, lies an immersive symphony waiting to be embraced. Constructed by an outstanding musician of language, that charming masterpiece conducts visitors on a mental trip, skillfully unraveling the hidden songs and profound affect resonating within each carefully crafted phrase.
