

Nurses role in palliative care

- All nurses should be able to:
 - Undertake basic symptom assessment and management.
 - Understand the experience of the dying patient and their families.
 - Engage in communication regarding individual needs and experiences.
 - Consult the specialist palliative care practitioners if the needs of patients are out of the nurses experience.

Communication in Palliative Nursing Elaine Wittenberg-Lyles, 2013 This book unites complementary work in communication studies and nursing research to present a theoretically grounded curriculum for teaching palliative care communication to nurses The chapters outline the COMFORT curriculum Central to this curriculum is the need for nurses to practice self care

Textbook of Palliative Care Communication Elaine Wittenberg PhD, Betty R. Ferrell RN, PhD, MA, FAAN, FPCN, CHPN, Joy Goldsmith PhD, Thomas Smith MD, Sandra Ragan MD, Myra Glajchen, The Rev. George Handzo, 2015-10-23 The Textbook of Palliative Care Communication is the authoritative text on communication in palliative care providing a compilation of international and interdisciplinary perspectives The volume was uniquely developed by an interdisciplinary editorial team to address an array of providers including physicians nurses social workers and

chaplains and unites clinicians with academic researchers interested in the study of communication. By featuring practical conversation and curriculum tools stemming from research, this text integrates scholarship and inquiry into translatable content that others can use to improve their practice, teach skills to others, and engage in patient-centered communication. The volume begins by defining communication, explicating debatable issues in research, and highlighting specific approaches to studying communication in a palliative care context. Chapters focus on health literacy and cultural communication, patient and family communication barriers, and approaches to discussing palliative care with specific patient populations, discussing pain, life support, advance care planning, and quality of life topics such as sexuality, spirituality, hope, and grief. Team communication in various care settings is outlined, and current research and education for healthcare professionals are summarized. Unique to this volume are chapters on conducting communication research, both qualitatively and quantitatively, to promote further research in palliative care.

Palliative Care for Chronic Cancer Patients in the Community Michael Silbermann, 2020-10-29

The new global cancer data suggests that the global burden has risen to 18.1 million new cases per year and 9.6 million cancer deaths per year. A number of factors appear to be driving this increase, in particular, a growing and aging global population and an increase of exposure to cancer risk factors linked to social and economic development. For rapidly growing economies, the data suggests a shift from poverty or infection-related cancers to those associated with lifestyles more typical in industrialized countries. There is still large geographical diversity in cancer occurrence and variations in the magnitude and profile of the disease between and within world regions. There are specific types of cancer that dominate globally: lung, female breast, and colorectal cancer, and the regional variations in common cancer types signal the extent to which societal, economic, and lifestyle changes interplay to differentially impact on the profile of this most complex group of diseases. Unfortunately, despite advances in cancer care, a significant proportion of patients at home experience sub-optimal outcomes. Barriers to successful treatment outcomes include, but are not limited to, access to oncologists in the primary health centers, non-adherence, lack of experienced oncology and palliative care nurses in the community, inadequate monitoring, and the lack of training of family and pediatric physicians. Telemedicine approaches, including telephone triage, education, telemonitoring, teleconsultation, and status tracking through mobile applications, have shown promise in further improving outcomes, in particular for chronic cancer patients following their hospitalization. Lessons can be learned from existing hospices in North America, the United Kingdom, Australia, Centers of Excellence in Africa, Uganda, and modern community services in India, Kerala. An important goal of this book is to describe and encourage professionals to develop new community programs in palliative care, which include training and empowering physicians and nurses in the community on the principles of palliative care. The Middle East Cancer Consortium (MECC), together with the American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO) and the American Oncology Nursing Society (ONS), have conducted multiple courses ranging from basic palliative care to more specialized training in palliative care for multiple nationalities in Europe.

Asia and Africa Our experience clearly indicates that to promote such activities one needs strong leadership and confirmed political will to support the endeavor The new book will emphasize the importance of having a core of multiple stakeholders including community leaders government NGOs and media to be actively involved in advocating for the cause and generating public awareness This text will provide the reader with a comprehensive understanding of the outside of the hospital treatment of cancer patients by medical paramedical and volunteer personnel In doing so this text will encourage the creation of new palliative care services improving upon the existing ones and stimulate further research in this field Part 1 of the text will begin with an overview of the current state of affairs of services provided to cancer patients while being cared for by primary health centers It will also review the current literature regarding medical and psychological based therapy options in the community for cancer patients at different stages of their disease Part 2 will address the unique role of the community nurse within the framework of the multidisciplinary team treating the patient in the attempt to provide optimal evaluation and care in very challenging situations such as with terminal patients Part 3 will provide insightful models of this new discipline and serve as a valuable resource for physicians nurses social workers and others involved in the care of cancer patients The book will take a multidisciplinary approach integrating clinical and environmental data for practical management to enhance the efficacy of treatment while relieving suffering Part 4 will also discuss the application of modern technological approaches to track symptoms quality of life diet mobility duration of sleep and medication use including pain killers in chronic cancer patients in the community Part 5 of the book will also be devoted to modes of developing a collaborative program between governmental and non governmental organization sectors This includes volunteer workers in close collaboration with medical professionals for providing emotional and spiritual support nursing care nutritional support and empowering family caregivers Such a model makes palliative care in the community a people s movement thus transferring part of the responsibility and ownership to the community
