Béres, Jan Fook, 2019-08-13 Learning Critical Reflection documents the actual learning experiences of social work students and practitioners. It explores how a more in depth understanding of the process of learning combined with an analysis of how to critically reflect will help improve the learning process. The contributors are all professionals who have learnt in a formalised way how to critically reflect on their practice. They speak in depth and with feeling about their experiences, how downsides and upsides worked together to transform the way they understood themselves, their professional identity and their practice. Existing literature about critical reflection is reviewed, identifying the details of learning and pulling no punches in recognising the difficulty and complexity of becoming transformed through this learning process. The editors of this book also contribute their own reflections on learning how to teach critical reflection and include the findings of a research study conducted on students learning. Edited by two experienced educators, this book showcases the process of learning from the perspective of the learners in order that educators and students, managers, supervisors and frontline practitioners alike may make the most of opportunities to critically reflect in both educational and workplace settings. It should be considered essential reading for social work students, practitioners and educators. The Moods of Presque Isle

Eugene H. Ware, 2004-11-11 The Moods of Presque Isle is a book of photography, poetry and prose which provides a visual treat for your mind and eyes. The poetry and photography blend to produce reflections and emotions within the reader. The setting is an eight mile long sand peninsula jutting out into Lake Erie. Formed over the last thousand years and constantly moving with Lake Erie currents, it is the most visited state park in the Pennsylvania system of parks. It is a haven for natural beauty, birds, animals and rare plants. Presque Isle seems to be one of the places on earth that God paused to create something special. A place where man could stop and reflect on what is right about the world. A place to pause for a moment to drink in the beauty that nature has to offer. It is an enchanting place where colors seem brighter, air softer and where time moves slowly. Presque Isle is one of those places calm enough for you to get quiet inside yourself. A place where solitude and reflection are greater gifts than sun and sand. The subjects of the poems and prose in the book are varied. They run from colors of fall to the tiny kingdom found on the forest floor, from water lilies to the horrors of 9/11, from an approaching storm to a lover's hand and hand walk on the beach. Season, colors, moods and dreams fill the pages of this book of reflections and life experiences. As you read each poem, you will be able to slow down, take a minute to reflect on the complementary photographs accompanying the words. The theme of the book is the beauty, quiet and solitude offered by nature. The author believes that if you love nature, nature will open up a whole new world for your enjoyment. The book is an attempt to paint words and photography as one and create a mood with nature for the reader. Unnatural Ecopoetics Sarah

Nolan, 2017-04-28 What constitutes an environment in American literature is an issue that has undergone much debate across environmental humanities in the last decade. In the field, some have argued that environments are markedly natural or wild sites while others contend literary spaces can be both wild and urban or even cultural. Yet few of the works produced to date have addressed the pronounced influence the author of a text has on a literary environment Despite exciting work on materiality and culture in conceptions of environments critics have not yet fully examined the contributions of poetry's language form and self awareness in rethinking what constitutes an environment By approaching environments in a new way Nolan closes this gap and recognizes how contemporary poets employ self reflexive commentary and formal experimentation in order to create new natural cultural environments on the page She proposes a radical new direction for ecopoetics and deploys it in relation to four major American poets Working from literal to textual spaces through the contemporary poetry of A R Ammons's Garbage Lyn Hejinian's My Life Susan Howe's The Midnight and Kenneth Goldsmith's Seven American Deaths and Disasters the book presents applications of unnatural ecopoetics in poetic environments ones that do not engage with traditional ideas of nature and would otherwise remain outside the scope of ecocritical and ecopoetic studies Nolan proposes a new practical approach for reading poetic language Ecocriticism is a very fluid and evolving discipline and Nolan's pioneering new book pushes the boundaries of second wave ecopoetics the fundamental issue being what is nature natural and how does poetic language particularly self conscious contemporary poetic agency contribute to and complicate that question

The Fetters of Rhyme Rebecca M. Rush, 2024-12-17 How rhyme became entangled with debates about the nature of liberty in sixteenth and seventeenth century English poetry In his 1668 preface to Paradise Lost John Milton rejected the use of rhyme portraying himself as a revolutionary freeing English verse from the troublesome and modern bondage of Riming Despite his claim to be a pioneer Milton was not initiating a new line of thought English poets had been debating about rhyme and its connections to liberty freedom and constraint since Queen Elizabeth's reign The Fetters of Rhyme traces this dynamic history of rhyme from the 1590s through the 1670s Rebecca Rush uncovers the surprising associations early modern readers attached to rhyming forms like couplets and sonnets and she shows how reading poetic form from a historical perspective yields fresh insights into verse's complexities Rush explores how early modern poets imagined rhyme as a band or fetter comparing it to the bonds linking individuals to political social and religious communities She considers how

Edmund Spenser's sonnet rhymes stood as emblems of voluntary confinement how John Donne's revival of the Chaucerian couplet signaled sexual and political radicalism and how Ben Jonson's verse charted a middle way between licentious Elizabethan couplet poets and slavish sonneteers Rush then looks at why the royalist poets embraced the prerational charms of rhyme and how Milton spent his career reckoning with rhyme's allures Examining a poetic feature that sits between sound and sense liberty and measure The Fetters of Rhyme elucidates early modern efforts to negotiate these forces in verse making and reading Restoration and Eighteenth-Century Poetry 1660-1780 \(Routledge Revivals\) Eric Rothstein, 2014-10-10 Restoration and Eighteenth Century Poetry 1660 1780 originally published in 1981 considers poetry written between 1660 and 1780 a period which although largely recovered from its nineteenth century reputation still attracts widely varying critical responses Abandoning the old labels such as neoclassicism romanticism and sensibility the author focuses on descriptions of genres and their formal elements and traces the broader patterns of literary and historical change running through the period Eric Rothstein describes different poetic modes panegyric satire pastoral and topographical poetry the epistle and the ode to suggest their aesthetical possibilities as well as their process of change He also considers style and the uses of the past topics which have often caused particular problems for the students of the period What becomes clear is the extraordinary originality flexibility and power with which Restoration and eighteenth century poets handles the stylistic assumptions and the body of poems they inherited and employed in their own works

Between Life and Thought Don Seeman, Devaka Premawardhana, 2024-03-26 Existential anthropology is an approach inspired by existential and phenomenological thought to further our understanding of the human condition Its ethnographic methodology emphasizes embodied experience and focuses on what is at stake for people amid the contingencies struggles and uncertainties of everyday life While anthropological research on religion abounds there has been little systematic attention to the ways anthropology and religious studies might benefit from better consideration of one another or from the adoption of a shared existential perspective Between Life and Thought gathers leading anthropologists and religion scholars including some of existential anthropology's most recognized advocates and thoughtful critics The collection opens with a comprehensive introduction to phenomenology and existentialism in anthropology and religious studies and concludes with an analysis of how existential anthropology might address the long standing problem of constructivism and perennialism in religious studies The chapters altogether present existential anthropology as an especially generative paradigm with which to rethink and remake both anthropology and the academic study of religion A timely and significant intervention across multiple areas of research Between Life and Thought is an invaluable source for critically exploring the prospects as well as the limits of an anthropological approach to religion grounded in experiential ethnography and existential thought The Politics of Written Language in the Arab World, 2017-07-31 The Politics of Written Language in the Arab World connects the fascinating field of contemporary written Arabic with the central sociolinguistic notions of language ideology and diglossia. Focusing on Egypt and Morocco the authors combine large scale survey data on language attitudes with in depth analyses of actual language usage and explicit and implicit language ideology. They show that writing practices as well as language attitudes in Egypt and Morocco are far more receptive to vernacular forms than has been assumed. The individual chapters cover a wide variety of media from books and magazines to blogs and Tweets. A central theme running through the contributions is the social and political function of doing informality in a changing public sphere steadily more permeated by written Arabic in a number of media.

Modern Irish Poetry: A New Alhambra Frank Sewell, 2001-01-25 Recently chapters on individual Irish language authors have formed part of publications regarding modern Irish art and culture in general. Such chapters are welcome but they have excited the curiosity of readers to the degree that longer more detailed works are now required to put writing in Irish into perspective. In this study of four modern poets two each from two generations Sewell attempts to illustrate not only the accumulative but the transformative nature of tradition. Chapters 1 and 2 turn from the mid 20th century master Seán Riordáin to the contemporary poet Cathal Searcaigh because the comparison and contrast highlights significant aspects of the amazing development of Irish poetry and indeed society in the period. Here importantly the word development is meant in a neutral way the image used is that of a zig zag movement in the pattern of the continuing Irish tradition. Chapter 3 returns to the slightly earlier major Irish language poet Mairéad Ní Dire. In doing so it returns home from the internationalism of the previous chapter on Searcaigh to Ireland a major focus and concern for the more solely traditionalist Ní Dire. This switch back in time geography social mores or outlook fits and illustrates Sewell's concept of the zig zag movement of a country's culture as it proceeds from generation to generation. The positioning therefore has a thematic purpose. The fourth and final chapter focuses on the contemporary poet Nuala Ní Dhomhnaill who has managed to synthesise tradition and modernity central concerns of this book and who in doing so has become the current trail blazer of Irish poetry in either language.
