Prostate Cancer 2000 L. Denis, 2012-12-06 All epidemiological data predict an endemic rise of prostate cancer in populations with a high proportion of elderly people leading to a major health problem. The only way to stem this evolution is early detection in organised randomised trials. Discussion of this controversial subject is followed by an exhaustive review of the endocrine mechanisms stimulating prostate growth and the promising avenues of future research and treatment. Radical prostatectomy and radiotherapy are presented and analysed. Once patients are past this stage of cure a wide array of medical treatments are available. Endocrine treatment is the first choice and the different regimes are reviewed as to their respective advantages and side effects. An entirely new approach to hormone refractory diseases completes this overview.

Antiandrogens in Prostate Cancer Louis Denis, 2012-12-06 The European School of Oncology came into existence to respond to a need for information education and training in the field of the diagnosis and treatment of cancer. There are two main reasons why such an initiative was considered necessary. Firstly the teaching of oncology requires a rigorously multidisciplinary approach which is difficult for the Universities to put into practice since their system is mainly disciplinary orientated. Secondly the rate of technological development that impinges on the diagnosis and treatment of cancer has been so rapid that it is not an easy task for medical faculties to adapt their curricula flexibly. With its residential courses for organopathologies and the seminars on new techniques laser monoclonal antibodies imaging techniques etc or on the principal therapeutic controversies conservative or mutilating surgery primary or adjuvant chemotherapy radiotherapy alone or integrated it is the ambition of the European School of Oncology to fill a cultural and scientific gap and thereby create a bridge between the University and Industry and between these two and daily medical practice. One of the more recent initiatives of ESO has been the institution of permanent study groups also called task forces where a limited number of leading experts are invited to meet once a year with the aim of defining the state of the art and possibly reaching a consensus on future developments in specific fields of oncology. The Medical Management of Prostate Cancer Louis Denis, 2012-12-06 Starting in 1986 the European School of Oncology has expanded its activities in postgraduate teaching which consisted mainly of traditional disease orientated courses by promoting new educational initiatives One of these is the cloister seminars short meetings intended for highly qualified oncologists and dealing with specific controversial aspects of clinical practice and research Another is the institution of permanent study groups also called task forces where a limited number of leading experts are invited to meet once a year with the aim of defining the state of the art and possibly reaching a consensus on developments and treatment in specific fields of oncology This series of ESO Monographs was designed with the specific purpose of disseminating the results of the most interesting of the seminars and study groups and providing concise and updated reviews of the subjects discussed It was decided to keep the layout very simple in order to keep costs to a minimum and make the monographs available in the shortest possible time thus overcoming a common problem in medical literature that of the material being outdated even before publication
