Food First Resource Guide Institute for Food and Development Policy (Oakland, Calif.),1979 Abstract Explanations and possible solutions are offered onthe cause of world hunger Contrary to popular belief world hunger is not the result of scarcity of resources or overpopulation Rather hunger is caused by the inequality in control over food producing resources The solution to these inequalities is not more advanced technologies agribusiness or foreign aid The redistribution of control over food producing resources can result in greater food production Democratic participation in deciding how production will be used is the only insurance that it will benefit the producers However land redistribution alone isnot adequate peasant classes must work for land reform and organize to protect their own interests

New Horizons in English 3 , Sustainable Aquaculture Production for Improved Food Security Kwasi Adu Adu Obirikorang, Mathis Von Ahnen, Kwamena Quagraine, Jemimah Etornam Kassah, 2024-11-22 Food security has been persistently recognized in global discourse as one of the world's main challenges. While some progress has been made towards ensuring access to safe, nutritious and sufficient food for all people all year round, SDG Target 2.1 or eradicating all forms of malnutrition, SDG Target 2.2, over 800 million people are estimated to suffer from chronic hunger. With outputs from capture fisheries stagnating over the past few decades, aquaculture holds the potential to play crucial roles in achieving food security, but its importance for food security and nutrition has often been undervalued and concerns exist regarding its environmental footprint. The rapid expansion of aquaculture has consequences relating to environmental sustainability, but aquaculture nonetheless holds the potential to significantly contribute to human food security. The goal of this collection is to highlight the contribution of aquaculture to food security through the development of sound and sustainable production practices. The focus will include all three pillars of sustainability: environmental sustainability, production technologies that optimize fish production and/or minimize significant environmental disruptions or impacts, economic sustainability, value chain analyses, market access for fish products, policy analysis and social and community sustainability, socially responsible aquaculture practices contributing to food security and well-being.
