Hoang, Makoto Tawada, 2022-05-03 This volume spotlights some of the most important economic issues confronting today's emerging developing countries The topics studied in the book include the importance of productivity to economic growth international trade and its relationship to productivity immigration and brain drain pollution havens climate change and the carbon tax the effectiveness of foreign aid the efficiency of education and governance Written by some of the most respected scholars in their respective fields the individual chapters apply both economic theory and the most current empirical tools in rigorous but accessible exposition Researchers can find value in the modeling and empirical techniques that can be applied to other countries and datasets Policy makers can benefit from the intellectual foundation on which decisions on important issues can be based and students of international trade economic development and environmental economics can gain knowledge of different country settings that give context to their fields of study The Economics of Urban Property Markets Paschalis Arvanitidis, 2014-08-13 This book examines the relationship between the property market and urban economy The stimulus for this work was provided by the seemingly ever accelerating process of urban economic change and the noticeable failure of existing studies to adequately explore the pivotal role that the property market plays in this process Drawing on institutional economics the central argument of the book is that the property market as an institution is a mediator through which urban economic potential can be realised and served In developing this argument the book provides a critical realist ontological framework that advances understanding of the institutional structure of the economy and the complex interrelation between the institutional environment and human agency as well as a holistic theoretical framework of urban economic change where appropriate emphasis is placed on the specific mechanisms processes and dynamics through which the built environment is provided Arvanitidis also explores an institutional conceptualisation of property market efficiency defined in terms of the ability of the market institution to adapt its structure and to provide outcomes that the economy requires To inform empirical research on the developed concepts the book also offers a generic analytical approach

specifying appropriate research methods and techniques for investigation along with a specific research design providing an operational framework that translates developed theory into empirical practice The book's primary contribution therefore lies in its delineation of a holistic research programme to conceptualise the property market as an institution and to explore its role within the urban economy

Ms.Dalia Hakura,Mr.Mumtaz Hussain,Ms.Monique Newiak,Vimal Thakoor,Mr.Fan Yang,2016-06-08 A growing body of empirical evidence suggests that inequality income or gender related can impede economic growth Using dynamic panel regressions and new time series data this paper finds that both income and gender inequalities including from legal gender based restrictions are jointly negatively associated with per capita GDP growth Examining the relationship for countries at different stages of development we find that this effect prevails mainly in lower income countries In particular per capita income growth in sub Saharan Africa could be higher by as much as 0.9 percentage points on average if inequality was reduced to the levels observed in the fastgrowing emerging Asian countries High levels of income inequality in sub Saharan Africa appear partly driven by structural features However the paper s findings show that policies that influence the opportunities of low income households and women to participate in economic activities also matter and therefore if well designed and targeted could play a role in alleviating inequalities The Oxford Handbook of the Mauritian Economy
