Rogers, Robert A. Hummer, Charles B. Nam, 1999-10-06 The simplicity of using one data set in addressing the relationship of single variables to mortality distinguishes Living and Dying in the USA from other recent investigations of mortality The authors use the recently released National Health Interview Survey and the National Death Index to make a definitive statement about demographics and mortality By surveying demographic and sociocultural characteristics associated with mortality socioeconomic effects health related conditions and health status they reveal connections among several factors related to mortality chances Easily understood and cited their study emphasizes the statistical methods underlying their revelations and invites readers to duplicate their results Comprehensive coverage of US adult mortality differentials Based on a new and innovative data set Includes factors rarely examined in related mortality research Not only documents mortality differentials but explores explanations for them Extensive list of references associated with each chapter Consistent straightforward methodology used throughout aids readers in both understanding the content and in comparing results from chapter to chapter The Farmer's Standard of Living Ellis Lore Kirkpatrick, 1929 Bibliography on Racism, 1972-1975 Center for Minority Group Mental Health Programs (U.S.), 1978 Fitting and Selling Shoes John Appleton Beaumont, 1945 Vocational Division Bulletin United States. Division of Vocational Education, 1944 Close Relationship Loss Terri L. Orbuch, 2012-12-06 Social scientists from various disciplines have been increasingly concerned with the nature structure and function of close relationships Although most of the early work on the topic of close relationships drew attention to the development of close relationships since the mid 1970s researchers have begun to investigate the many different aspects connected to the loss of close relationships Despite the change to a more comprehensive conceptual framework close relationship research is often criticized for being atheoretical the research is criticized for being purely descriptive in nature and thus lacking a more theoretical framework Contrary to this belief I wish to argue that researchers in the area of close relationship loss employ several critical and prominent theoretical perspectives to describe explain and understand the endings of relationships thus the fruition of this book The major aim of this edited book is to present and illuminate within one volume some of these major theoretical perspectives The volume as a whole has several unique qualities First within each chapter the authors provide a general overview of the theoretical perspective or approach within which they examine close relationship loss      Thesaurus of ERIC Descriptors ,1975      Bulletin United States. Department of Agriculture,1928      Technical Bulletin ,1922
