The Kairos Document: Challenge to the Church: A Theological Comment on the Political Crisis in South Africa. By the Kairos Theologians. Braamfontein: 1985. Pp. 30. $1.50. Available in the United States from: Theology Global Context, Stony Point Center, Crickettown Road, Stony Point, NY 10983.

THE POLITICS OF SENTIMENT is a disturbing book, not because of new data or penetrating analysis—there is all too little along these lines—but on account of its ideological obsessions. In six chapters it sets out to survey the moral, economic, and political issues surrounding disinvestment as a tactic to induce social change, as a means of dismantling apartheid. The views of the World Council of Churches are addressed, voices from the South African churches and from the American churches are noted, “Economic Facts and Political Realities” are outlined and the work concludes with a chapter entitled “The Churches and South Africa: Towards Greater Effectiveness.”

Unfortunately for Richard Sincere and his close collaborator Ernest Lefever (President of The Ethics and Public Policy Center), the issues surrounding investment in South Africa cannot be explored adequately without an analysis of the apartheid system and its flexible modes of protecting white power and economic privilege—a discipline the book eschews. We are told the purpose is not to examine “the wide range of problems inherent in the quest for justice in a multi-racial, multi-cultural, multi-lingual society”; rather the intent is singlemindedly to “evaluate one of several tactics by which outsiders have attempted to stimulate change in South Africa,” (p.9) namely disinvestment. As the book proceeds, it becomes all too obvious that the latter requires the former.

Without placing the disinvestment debate within the broader South African setting, the claim to objectivity—the smug attack on “Sentiment”—turns out to be nothing more than a facade for the long established premises of the Ethics and Public Policy Center. Data and the informed judgments of socially conscious, politically active

The Business Turn in American Religious History Amanda Porterfield, Darren E. Grem, John Corrigan, 2017 Business has received little attention in American religious history although it has profound implications for understanding the sustained popularity and ongoing transformation of religion in the United States This volume offers a wide ranging exploration of the business aspects of American religious organizations The authors analyze the financing production marketing and distribution of religious goods and services and the role of wealth and economic organization in sustaining and even shaping worship charity philanthropy institutional growth and missionary work Treating religion and business holistically their essays show that American religious life has always been informed by business practices Laying the groundwork for further investigation the authors show how American business has functioned as a domain for achieving religious goals Indeed they find that religion has historically been more powerful when interwoven with business Chapters on Mormon enterprise Jewish philanthropy Hindu gurus Native American casinos and the wedding of business wealth to conservative Catholic social teaching demonstrate the range of new studies stimulated by the business turn in American religious history Other chapters show how evangelicals joined neo liberal economic practice and right wing politics to religious fundamentalism to consolidate wealth and power and how they developed marketing campaigns and organizational strategies that transformed the American religious landscape Included are essays exposing the moral compromises religious organizations have made to succeed as centers of wealth and influence and the religious beliefs that rationalize and justify these compromises Still others examine the application of business practices as a means of sustaining religious institutions and expanding their reach and look at controversies over business practices within religious organizations and the adjustments such organizations have made in response Together the essays collected here offer new ways of conceptualizing the interdependence of religion and business in the United States establishing multiple paths for further study of their intertwined historical development United States Sanctions and South Africa Terrel D. Hale, 1993-07-27 During the last twenty years United States attitudes and legislation regarding sanctions against South Africa have gone through considerable flux This bibliography is designed to provide a guide to the statutes dealing with sanctions government documents examining the issue and books articles and pamphlets issued on the topic The bibliography is organized by type of material with the bulk of the entries annotated and with access enhanced by a general subject index keyed to entry number
