Race Differences in Inhibition Albert Loyal Crane, 1923 Ethnic Differences Joel Perlmann, 1988 A sample of nearly 12 000 Irish Italians Jews Blacks and non immigrants from Providence Rhode Island provides the material for assessment of variations in educational patterns and economic success Race, Racism, and Psychology Graham Richards, 1997 This book presents a controversial analysis of the debates surrounding race in the psychological literature of this century Graham Richards contextualizes some famous studies to present the basis of their outlook on race and racism Race Vincent Sarich, Frank Miele, 2005-08-19 Arguing that race is a biologically significant difference the authors challenge the weight of academic opinion on the subject and suggest honesty rather than fear mongering in light of growing evidence that the various races are significantly different 20 000 first printing Explaining ethnic differences Mason, David, 2003-07-23 This book focuses on the changing terrain of ethnic disadvantage in Britain drawing on up to date sources It goes further than texts that merely describe ethnic inequalities to explore and explain their dynamic nature It suggests that the increasing diversity of experience among different ethnic groups is a key to understanding continuing and emerging tensions and conflicts Explaining ethnic differences provides up to date data and analysis of ethnic diversity and changing patterns of disadvantage in Britain covers key areas of social life including demographic trends education employment housing health gender and policing and community disorder is written by leading experts in the field addresses issues of urgent public importance in the context of recent community disorder and the resurgence of the far right The book is essential reading for policy makers in central and local government academics postgraduate students and advanced undergraduates in the social sciences social work health education and housing professionals and criminal justice personnel Why Race Matters Michael E. Levin, 1997 Opposing the denial of race differences and the claim that they do not matter anyway Michael Levin explains why these differences do matter He summarizes what has been written about the differences in intelligence and temperament and more important explores their larger significance He rejects charges that biological explanations of behavior are reductionist or determinist and he explains the circularity of explaining culture in terms of culture Levin's naturalistic outlook finds no group superior and predicts moral divergence among groups evolving in different environments With logical rigor Levin addresses conceptual issues not touched upon in previous hereditarian work drawing striking conclusions about justice race consciousness affirmative action individualism and private and state action Scholars researchers policymakers and the reading public concerned with issues of race relations social philosophy contemporary moral problems and the psychology of race differences will find the book provocative No one making an effort to think clearly about race can ignore Why Race Matters Understanding Racial and Ethnic Differences in Health in Late Life National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, Panel on Race, Ethnicity, and Health in Later Life, 2004-09-08 As the population of older Americans grows it is becoming more racially and ethnically diverse Differences in health by racial and ethnic status could be increasingly consequential for health policy and programs Such differences are not simply a matter of education or ability to pay for health care For instance Asian Americans and Hispanics appear to be in better health on a number of indicators than White Americans despite on average lower socioeconomic status The reasons are complex including possible roles for such factors as selective migration risk behaviors exposure to various stressors patient attitudes and geographic variation in health care This volume produced by a multidisciplinary panel considers such possible explanations for racial and ethnic health differentials within an integrated framework It provides a concise summary of available research and lays out a research agenda to address the many uncertainties in current knowledge It recommends for instance looking at health differentials across the life course and deciphering the links between factors presumably producing differentials and biopsychosocial mechanisms that lead to impaired health

Racial and Ethnic Differences in Disease Anthony P. Polednak, 1989 This book presents a comprehensive account of differences in the frequencies of various diseases among a wide range of racial and ethnic groups throughout the world today It provides epidemiologists physicians sociologists and anthropologists with a methodological framework for understanding the concepts of race and ethnic group the use of these concepts in epidemiology and the interpretation of epidemiologic studies of disease The volume includes information on the physical anthropology of major racial ethnic groups as well as chapters on genetic diseases infectious and parasitic diseases cardiovascular diseases cancers and many other chronic disorders Each chapter provides descriptive information on the relative frequencies of diseases and the methods used in studies as well as a systematic discussion of the interpretation of the racial and ethnic differences described which may arise from such factors as errors in measurement or socioeconomic differences between groups Genetic and biological factors are also considered and many individual studies are summarized and critically appraised The text is ideal for graduates and undergraduates alike while the authors non technical approach is easily accessible to general readers with an interest in the subject

Racial and Ethnic Differences in the Health of Older Americans National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, 1997-10-23 Older Americans even the oldest can now expect to live years longer than those who reached the same ages even a few decades ago Although survival has improved for all racial and ethnic groups strong differences persist both in life expectancy and in the causes of disability and death at older ages This book examines trends in mortality rates and selected causes of disability

cardiovascular disease dementia for older people of different racial and ethnic groups The determinants of these trends and differences are also investigated including differences in access to health care and experiences in early life diet health behaviors genetic background social class wealth and income Groups often neglected in analyses of national data such as the elderly Hispanic and Asian Americans of different origin and immigrant generations are compared The volume provides understanding of research bearing on the health status and survival of the fastest growing segment of the American population Critical Perspectives on Racial and Ethnic Differences in Health in Late Life National Research

Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, Panel on Race, Ethnicity, and Health in Later Life, 2004-10-16 In their later years Americans of different racial and ethnic backgrounds are not in equally good or equally poor health There is wide variation but on average older Whites are healthier than older Blacks and tend to outlive them But Whites tend to be in poorer health than Hispanics and Asian Americans This volume documents the differentials and considers possible explanations Selection processes play a role selective migration for instance or selective survival to advanced ages Health differentials originate early in life possibly even before birth and are affected by events and experiences throughout the life course Differences in socioeconomic status risk behavior social relations and health care all play a role Separate chapters consider the contribution of such factors and the biopsychosocial mechanisms that link them to health This volume provides the empirical evidence for the research agenda provided in the separate report of the Panel on Race Ethnicity and Health in Later Life Ethnic Differences in Fertility and Assisted Reproduction Fady I.

Sharara, 2013-07-17 Over the past 10 years studies have shown that the rates of fertility vary in different ethnic groups Ethnic differences also play a significant role in the outcome of assisted reproductive technology ART cycles In the United States minority groups African Americans Hispanics mainly Mexicans and Central Americans East Asians Chinese Japanese Koreans Philipinos and South Asians Indians Pakistanis and Bengalis have significantly lower chances of live births compared to Caucasian women Birth outcome data collected by the Society for Assisted Reproductive Technology shows a worsening trend in conception rates between the years 1999 2000 and 2004 2006 raising more concern that the disparity in fertility rates between minority groups and white women is widening over time This comprehensive book serves to answer the questions that arise when managing infertility in a multi ethnic population An expert assembly of key leaders in the field of reproductive medicine imparts insight and clinical experience in order to identify and analyze the possible causes of racial disparities in fertility outcome Some of the reviewed causes include higher Body Mass Index BMI tubal diseases metabolic syndrome and fibroids in African Americans tubal disease and higher early pregnancy loss in Hispanics higher incidence of diminished ovarian reserve and lower BMI in East Asians and higher incidence of polycystic ovarian disease PCOS in South Asians The book also provides a review of data on access to care and ART services in developing countries A thoughtful combination of evidence based medicine and advanced treatment options this book is sure to distinguish itself as the

Sport, Racism And Ethnicity Grant Jarvie, 2003-09-02

First Published in 1991 Over the past decade there has been a notable growth of interest in the study of sport in the contexts of race and ethnicity A number of developments have contributed to stimulate this interest but three sets of considerations appear to have been of decisive importance First black sportsmen and sportswomen have experienced remarkable successes in international sport Second such a disproportionately high level of athletic participation by various ethnic minority cultures has often been used by liberal minded sports enthusiasts to presume that sport enjoys a certain degree of democratisation and equality Third that in certain areas of the world sport itself has been central to struggles of popular resistance against dominant groups The papers in this volume not only consider the racisms experienced by various ethnic minority sportsmen and sportswomen in Britain but also the way in which various racisms have been articulated in South Africa the Caribbean Canada and the United States The following are indicative of the key issues addressed by this text the extent to which cricket has stimulated the role of nationalist and racial self consciousness in the Caribbean the extent to which young black Afro Caribbean sports people are agents of racialised social control in Britain the contribution of sport to popular struggles in South Africa the experience of young children of South Asian origin of sport in Britain and the extent to which Native American women are accommodated in sport in Canada This book sets out to challenge many of the voluntarist racist cherished beliefs surrounding sport
