How Do Hurricane Katrina's Winds Blow? Liza Treadwell, 2014-03-26 The disproportionate effect of Hurricane Katrina on African Americans was an outcome created by law and societal construct not chance This book takes a hard look at racial stratification in American today and debunks the myth that segregation is a thing of the past An outstanding resource for students of African American history government policy sociology and human rights as well as readers interested in socioeconomics in the United States today this book examines why the divisions between the areas heavily damaged by Hurricane Katrina and those left unscathed largely coincided with the color lines in New Orleans neighborhoods and establishes how African Americans have suffered for 400 years under an oppressive system that has created a permanent underclass of second class citizenship Rather than focusing on the Katrina disaster itself the author presents significant evidence of how government policy and structure as well as societal mores permitted and sanctioned the dehumanization of African Americans purposefully placing them in disaster prone areas particularly those in New Orleans The historical context is framed within the construct of Hurricane Katrina and other hurricane catastrophes in New Orleans demonstrating that Katrina was not an anomaly For readers unfamiliar with the ugly existence of segregation in modern day America this book will likely shock and outrage as it sounds a call to both citizens and government to undertake the challenges we still face as a nation

To Intermix With Our White Brothers Thomas N. Ingersoll, 2005-11 The Native Americans of mixed ancestry in 1830 and why Andrew Jackson implemented a law to remove them Journal of Anthropological Research, 1983 New Dictionary of Scientific Biography Noretta Koertge, 2008 Also available online as part of the Gale Virtual Reference Library under the title Complete dictionary of scientific biography Ethnic Forum, 1990 Mid-American Review of Sociology, 1983 Anthropological Journal of Canada, 1983 Bibliography on Ethnic Relations with Special Reference to Malaysia and Singapore Chee Beng Tan, 1992 Human Evolution Milford H. Wolpoff, 1995 Handbook of Evolution Franz M. Wuketits, Christoph Antweiler, 2004 This two volume handbook is unique in spanning the entire field of evolution from the origins of life up to the formation of social structures and science and technology The author team of world renowned experts considers the subject from a variety of disciplines with continuous cross referencing so as to retain a logical internal structure The uniformly structured contributions discuss not merely the general knowledge behind the evolution of life but also the corresponding development of language society economies morality and politics The result is an overview of the history and methods used in the study of evolution including controversial theories and discussions A must for researchers in the natural sciences sociology and philosophy as well as for those interested in an interdisciplinary view of the status of evolution today Ten Years of Ethnic Forum, 1980-1989 and Cumulative Index Lubomyr Roman Wynar, 1991 The Nature of Race Ann Morning, 2011-06-24 Includes bibliographical references p 279 303 and index

Racial and Ethnic Differences in Disease Anthony P. Polednak, 1989 This book presents a comprehensive account of differences in the frequencies of various diseases among a wide range of racial and ethnic groups throughout the world today It provides epidemiologists physicians sociologists and anthropologists with a methodological framework for understanding the concepts of race and ethnic group the use of these concepts in epidemiology and the interpretation of epidemiologic studies of disease The volume includes information on the physical anthropology of major racial ethnic groups as well as chapters on genetic diseases infectious and parasitic diseases cardiovascular diseases cancers and many other chronic disorders Each chapter provides descriptive information on the relative frequencies of diseases and the methods used in studies as well as a systematic discussion of the interpretation of the racial and ethnic differences described which may arise from such factors as errors in measurement or socioeconomic differences between groups Genetic and biological factors are also considered and many individual studies are summarized and critically appraised The text is ideal for graduates and undergraduates alike while the authors non technical approach is easily accessible to general readers with an interest in the subject

DNA Is Not Destiny: The Remarkable, Completely Misunderstood Relationship between You and Your Genes Steven J. Heine, 2017-04-18 An important book Heine s vibrant writing makes it come alive with personal significance for every reader Carol Dweck author of Mindset Scientists expect one billion people to have their genomes sequenced by 2025 Yet cultural psychologist Steven J Heine argues that in trying to know who we are and where we come from we re likely to completely misinterpret what s in our DNA Heine s fresh surprising conclusions about the promise and limits of genetic engineering and DNA testing upend conventional thinking and reveal a simple profound truth your genes create life but they do not control it

Human Variation Stephen Molnar, 2015-09-04 Basic text for the sophomore junior level course in Human Variation or Human Diversity taught anthropology or biology departments This classic introduction to human variation has been thoroughly updated to include the issues and controversies facing the contemporary study of diversity

The Concept of Race in Natural and Social Science E. Nathaniel Gates, 2014-05-01 Explores the concept of race The term race which originally denoted genealogical or class identity has in the comparatively brief span of 300 years taken on an entirely new meaning In the wake of the Enlightenment it came to be applied to social groups This ideological transformation coupled with a dogmatic insistence that the groups so designated were natural and not socially created gave birth to the modern notion of races as genetically distinct entities The results of this view were the encoding of race and racial hierarchies in law literature and culture How racial categories facilitate social control The articles in the series demonstrate that the classification of humans according to selected physical characteristics was an arbitrary decision that was not based on valid scientific method They also examine the impact of colonialism on the propagation of the concept and note that racial categorization is a powerful social force that is often used to promote the interests of dominant social groups Finally the collection surveys how laws based on race have been enacted around the world to deny power to minority groups A multidisciplinary resource This collection of outstanding articles brings multiple perspectives to bear on race theory and draws on a wider ranger of periodicals than even the largest library usually holds Even if all the articles were available on campus chances are that a student would have to track them down in several libraries and microfilm collections Providing of course that no journals were reserved for graduate students out for binding or simply missing This convenient set saves students substantial time and effort by making available all the key articles in one reliable source Authoritative commentary The series editor has put together a balanced selection of the most significant works accompanied by expert commentary A general introduction gives important background information and outlines fundamental issues current scholarship and scholarly controversies Introductions to individual volumes put the articles in context and draw attention to germinal ideas and major shifts in the field After reading the material even a beginning student will have an excellent grasp of the basics of the subject
