comprehensive plan for revitalizing American education In Reinventing America's Schools David Osborne one of the world's foremost experts on public sector reform offers a comprehensive analysis of the charter school movements and presents a theory that will do for American schools what his New York Times bestseller Reinventing Government did for public governance in 1992 In 2005 when Hurricane Katrina devastated New Orleans the city got an unexpected opportunity to recreate their school system from scratch The state's Recovery School District RSD created to turn around failing schools gradually transformed all of its New Orleans schools into charter schools and the results are shaking the very foundations of American education Test scores school performance scores graduation and dropout rates ACT scores college going rates and independent studies all tell the same story the city's RSD schools have tripled their effectiveness in eight years Now other cities are following suit with state governments reinventing failing schools in Newark Camden Memphis Denver Indianapolis Cleveland and Oakland In this book Osborne uses compelling stories from cities like New Orleans and lays out the history and possible future of public education Ultimately he uses his extensive research to argue that in today's world we should treat every public school like a charter school and grant them autonomy accountability diversity of school designs and parental choice Center on Reinventing Public Education, 2003* The Center on Reinventing Public Education studies major issues in education reform and governance in order to improve policy and decision making in K-12 education

Charter Schools and Accountability in Public Education Paul T. Hill, Robin J. Lake, 2004-05-13 Charter schools are among the most debated and least understood phenomena in American education today At the heart of these matters is a contested question of accountability To survive charter schools must make and keep promises about what students will experience and learn under their purview However unlike public schools charter schools do not rely exclusively on their relationship with school districts They must also look to parents teachers and donors to cooperatively establish expectations of a particular school and its mission Aimed toward elected officials school reform activists and educators this book is the result of the first national scale study of charter school accountability The authors researched one hundred fifty schools and sixty authorizing agencies in Arizona California Colorado Georgia Massachusetts and Michigan These states contain the majority of charter schools that have been operating for three years or more and represent the major differences in state charter school legislation The authors include interviews from a range of participants in the field from state legislators and administrators to principals teachers and parents In assessing the structure of accountability as it works internally to bolster external confidence Hill and Lake suggest the struggle of charter schools actually complements those of standards based reform Both seek to transform public education to make schools responsible for performance not compliance
