América Latina y el Caribe: Relaciones Internacionales en el siglo XXI Francisco Rojas Aravena,2012 Frente a un nuevo contexto global con multiples actores y sin un multilateralismo efectivo el sistema multilateral se encuentra hoy en dia en crisis Esto se debe en gran parte a la crisis economico financiera que se vive desde el 2008 a menor atencion de los Estados Unidos hacia America Latina y otras regiones del mundo y su inercia unilateral al bloqueo en el sistema de Naciones Unidas y a la baja legitimidad de instituciones emergentes que no logran dar gobernabilidad global En Occidente se constatan cambios profundos e importantes como lo es la profundizacion de las relaciones de America Latina particularmente de America del Sur con la region Asia Pacifico la consolidacion de China como socio comercial estrategico relevante para America Latina desplazando a la Union Europea entre otros Ademas las revoluciones y cambios en los paises rabes y los cambios en Africa reorientan prioridades y tendencias en Europa que sin duda repercuten en America Latina Esta publicacion recoge las ideas centrales expuestas por destacados academicos acerca de los cambios globales y las distintas visiones de paises hegemonicos de la region y fuera de ella as como acerca de las diplomacias de Cumbres como la de APEC CELAC de las Americas y la Union Europea y las ideas expuestas en torno a temas emergentes transnacionales como lo son el cambio climatico la seguridad la gobernanza la gobernabilidad y la integracion A su vez se analizan los temas de seguridad y defensa de cara a los nuevos desafios del siglo XXI y los actores relevantes en la politica exterior hemisferica tales como Canada los Estados Unidos Mexico y Brasil Finalmente esta publicacion cuenta con una reflexion acerca de la vision sobre los cambios que se han dado que continan ocurriendo en el Sistema Internacional Description in English Latin America and the Caribbean International Relations in the 21st Century Summit Diplomacy and Spaces of Regional and Global Agreement Faced with a new global context that has multiple actors but no effective multilateralism the multilateral system is now in crisis This is largely due to the economic and financial crisis underway since 2008 to the United States paying less attention to Latin America and other regions of the world and its unilateral inertia and to the deadlock in the United Nations system and the reduced legitimacy of emerging institutions which are unable to achieve global governability In the West profound and important changes are being witnessed such as the deepening of relations between Latin America particularly South America and the Asia Pacific region and Chinas consolidation as a significant strategic trading partner for Latin America supplanting other partners like the European Union In addition the revolutions and transformations occurring in Arab countries and the changes taking place in Africa are reorienting priorities and trends in Europe that no doubt affect Latin America This publication brings together the main ideas presented by prominent academics with regard to these global changes and the different visions of hegemonic countries within and beyond the region and to summit diplomacies such as that of APEC CELAC the Americas and the EU as well as the ideas presented in relation to emerging transnational issues such as climate change security governance governability and integration In turn the issues of security and defense are analyzed in relation to the new challenges of the 21st century and the relevant actors within hemispheric foreign policy including Canada the United States Mexico and Brazil Lastly this work contains a reflection on this view of the changes that continue to take place within the International System     Los nuevos sujetos del derecho internacional Ramiro Acosta Cerón,2002
