Metropolitan Water Use Conflicts In Asia And The Pacific:

Metropolitan Water Use Conflicts In Asia And The Pacific James E. Nickum, 2019-03-12 Although Asia is the least urbanized continent it contains half of the world's megacities and many of the world's fastest growing economies Urban growth is already stressing local water supplies and causing intense conflict among water users between haves and have nots in urban areas as well as between farmers and fishers outside the cities In addition concern is growing over the depletion and degradation of water sources and over the impact of water policies and patterns of water use on the natural environment From the perspective of the maturing metropolitan water economy the contributors to this volume consider the problems of urban water management in the region They focus on the institutional and policy dimensions of conflict and seek to provide a range of viable options for reducing the growing frictions among water users Eight specific case studies of urban areas in Asia and the Pacific span a wide range of economic levels of development physical settings and hydrological conditions The book will be of interest to scholars and policymakers concerned with issues of water and environmental policy urban management and resource conflict in general Improving Water Policy and Governance Cecilia Tortajada, Asit Biswas, 2013-09-13 Old forms of governance in both public and private sectors are becoming increasingly irrelevant because of rapidly changing conditions Because of these changes both governance processes and the scope of the institutions through which power is exercised throughout society may have to undergo a radical break with the past and prevailing models of governance Water sector is an integral part of the global system Consequently its governance processes and the institutions responsible for its management must change as well in order to cope with the current challenges and potential future changes Because of these current and future changes water governance may have to change more during the next 20 years compared to the past 2000 years if societal expectations are to be successfully met All these changes will make water governance more complex than ever before witnessed in human history Improving water governance will require good and objective analyses of case studies from different parts of the world as to what has worked why and the enabling environments under which good governance has been possible The present volume analyses case studies of good water governance from different parts of the world and for different water use sectors It concludes with an analysis of the critical issues that should be considered for water governance and a priority research agenda for improving water governance in the future This book was published as a special issue of the International Journal of Water Resources Development Fault Lines in China's Economic Terrain Charles Jr. Wolf, K. C. Yeh, Benjamin Zycher, Nicholas Eberstadt, Sungho Lee, 2003-06-24 The authors consider how and by how much China's stellar economic performance might be impaired by eight potential adversities that China may face in the next decade unemployment poverty and social unrest corruption HIV AIDS and epidemic diseases water resource problems and pollution energy consumption and prices the fragile financial system and state owned enterprises curtailed foreign direct investment and serious military conflicts Cities Versus Agriculture François

Molle,2006 Water Binayak Ray,2008-07-25 Water The Looming Crisis in India analyzes the key issues in developing national freshwater policies for the mainland countries of the South Asian sub continent Ray suggests that freshwater policy must cover all aspects of physical environment and human life by noting that food and drought management are parts of freshwater policy and acknowledging that water is a scarce natural resource and has economic value He calls for the development of basin wide policies to minimize conflicts within riparian countries as well as a freshwater policy baseline to minimize internal conflicts on water sharing arrangements By pointing out the need for full participation of all stakeholders in developing a baseline policy including people displaced by the construction of large dams Ray suggests a new system in which riparian countries are guaranteed that no water related project proceeds without a transparently developed environmental impact assessment and evaluation of alternative options Successful Adaptation to Climate Change

Susanne Moser,Maxwell Boykoff,2013-07-18 What does successful adaptation look like This is a question we are frequently asked by planners policy makers and other professionals charged with the task of developing and implementing adaptation strategies While adaptation is increasingly recognized as an important climate risk management strategy and on the ground adaptation planning activity is becoming more common place there is no clear guidance as to what success would look like what to aim for and how to judge progress This edited volume makes significant progress toward unpacking the question of successful adaptation offering both scientifically informed and practice relevant answers from various sectors and regions of the world It brings together 18 chapters from leading experts within the field to present careful analyses of different cases and situations questioning throughout commonly avowed truisms and unspoken assumptions that have pervaded climate adaptation science and practice to date This book offers not one answer but demonstrates how the question of success in important ways is normative and context specific It identifies the various dimensions of success such as economic political institutional ecological and social explores the tensions between them and compiles encouraging evidence that resolutions can be found The book appraises how climatic and non climatic stressors play a role what role science does and can play in adaptation decision making and how trade offs and other concerns and priorities shape adaptation planning and implementation on the ground This is timely interdisciplinary text sheds light on key issues that arise in on the ground adaptation to climate change It bridges the gap between science and practical application of successful adaptation strategies and will be of interest to both students academics and practitioners Future Challenges of Providing High-Quality Water -

The Rise of the Regulatory State of the South Navroz K. Dubash, Bronwen Morgan, 2013-06-27 The 1990s and 2000s have witnessed a spurt of energetic institution building in the developing world as regulatory agencies emerge to take over the role of the executive in key sectors This rise of the regulatory state of the south is barely noticed both by scholars of regulation and of development let alone adequately documented and theorized Yet the consequences for the role of the state and modalities of governance in the south are substantial as politically charged decisions are handed over to formally technocratic agencies creating new arenas and forms of contestation over the gains and losses from development decisions Moreover this shift in the developing world comes at a time when the regulatory state in the north is under considerable stress from the global financial crisis Understanding the regulatory state of the south and particularly forms of accommodation to political pressures could stimulate a broader conversation around the role of the regulatory state in both north and south This volume seeks to provoke such a discussion by empirically exploring the emergence of regulatory agencies of a range of developing countries across Asia Africa and Latin America The cases focus on telecommunications electricity and water sectors that have often been at the frontlines of this transition The central question for the volume is Are there distinctive features of the regulatory state of the South shaped by the political economic context of the global south in the last two decades To assist in exploring this question the volume includes brief commentaries on the case studies from a range of disciplines development economics law and regulation development sociology and comparative politics Collectively the volume seeks to shape the contours of a productive inter disciplinary conversation on the emergence of a significant empirical phenomenon the rise of regulatory agencies in the developing world with implications both for the study of regulation and the study of development

Freshwater Resources and Interstate Cooperation Frederick D.

Gordon, 2008-10-22 Reports from the United Nations suggest that as much as forty percent of the global population could be without adequate freshwater supplies by 2015 leading some experts to predict that future wars will be fought over water rather than oil. Yet to date most nation states have been able to develop viable freshwater agreements to share this precious resource. Frederick D. Gordon examines how effective these accords are in sharing and redistributing water and whether they are sufficient to meet the increasing threat of water scarcity. Using an innovative ranking system, he assesses the significance of cooperation within both bilateral and multilateral accords, including the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Accords of 1993-1995, the Lesotho Highlands Water Treaty of 1986, and the 1994 Convention on Cooperation for the Protection and Sustainable Use of the River Danube. Gordon identifies central factors and stakeholders that are necessary for mitigating the risk of conflict and presents a template for understanding how state behavior can manage and sustain regional water resources.
