For Boys' Voice and Organ Choral Score

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a supervised walking program, 3 times per week, for 12 weeks. The control group (n = 20) did not participate in any exercise program. The primary outcome was the change in the 6-minute walk test (6MWT) score. Secondary outcomes included changes in heart rate, blood pressure, body mass index (BMI), and self-reported physical and psychological health. The 6MWT score increased significantly in the intervention group compared to the control group (p < 0.05). There were no significant differences in heart rate, blood pressure, BMI, or self-reported physical and psychological health between the two groups. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
