Reasonable Accommodation Lori G. Beaman, 2012-09-15 Often when a religious minority challenges mainstream customs the phrase reasonable accommodation is at the centre of the ensuing debate But does reasonable accommodation achieve its goal of integrating the rights of religious minorities with those of mainstream society or does it really emphasize inequality Reasonable Accommodation seeks to define the meaning of this phrase and to provide a much needed critical assessment of its use within Canada and abroad Woven throughout is commentary about whether there really is a religious majority in Canada how the idea of shared values obscures debate and how tolerating religious differences simply isn't enough to guarantee equality      God in Captivity Tanya Erzen, 2017-03-07 An eye opening account of how and why evangelical Christian ministries are flourishing in prisons across the United States It is by now well known that the United States incarceration rate is the highest in the world What is not broadly understood is how cash strapped and overcrowded state and federal prisons are increasingly relying on religious organizations to provide educational and mental health services and to help maintain order And these religious organizations are overwhelmingly run by nondenominational Protestant Christians who see prisoners as captive audiences Some twenty thousand of these Evangelical Christian volunteers now run educational programs in over three hundred US prisons jails and detention centers Prison seminary programs are flourishing in states as diverse as Texas and Tennessee California and Illinois and almost half of the federal prisons operate or are developing faith based residential programs Tanya Erzen gained inside access to many of these programs spending time with prisoners wardens and members of faith based ministries in six states at both male and female penitentiaries to better understand both the nature of these ministries and their effects What she discovered raises questions about how these ministries and the people who live in prison grapple with the meaning of punishment and redemption as well as what legal and ethical issues emerge when conservative Christians are the main and sometimes only outside forces in a prison system that no longer offers even the pretense of rehabilitation Yet Erzen also shows how prison ministries make undeniably positive impacts on the lives of many prisoners men and women who have no hope of ever leaving prison can achieve personal growth a sense of community and a degree of liberation within the confines of their cells With both empathy and a critical eye God in Captivity grapples with the questions of how faith based programs serve the punitive regime of the prison becoming a method of control behind bars even as prisoners use them as a lifeline for self transformation and dignity      Sociologies of Religion, 2015-07-14 Sociologies of Religion National Traditions presents fourteen histories of the sociological study of religion in a diverse set of nations Each of the histories is newly written by author who are uniquely situated to tell narrate the story of the field in their countries They give us the stories behind major personages theoretical traditions seminal works research institutes and professional associations The histories trace the various ways the field was established in different academic and religious contexts and the trajectories it took in emerging as a scientific specialty      Communities, identities and crime Spalek, Basia, 2007-11-21 Communities identities and crime provides a critical exploration of the importance of social identities when considering crime victimisation and criminal justice Offering a refreshing perspective on equality and diversity developments that feature in the policies and practices of criminal justice agencies the author critically examines race relations legislation race equality and criminal justice gender crime and victimisation the increasing role that faith communities play in community justice hate crimes committed against individuals motivated by prejudice community engagement and participation in criminal justice community cohesion and civil renewal The book incorporates a broader theoretical focus exploring identity theory late modernity identity constructions communities and belongingness The author

Lyons,2022-03-07 Despite being one of the most avowedly secular nations in the world Japan may have more prison chaplains per inmate than any other country the majority of whom are Buddhist priests In this groundbreaking study of prison religion in East Asia Adam Lyons introduces a form of chaplaincy rooted in the Buddhist concept of doctrinal admonition rather than Euro American notions of spiritual care Based on archival research fieldwork inside prisons and interviews with chaplains Karma and Punishment reveals another dimension of Buddhist modernism that developed as Japan s religious organizations carved out a niche as defenders of society by fighting crime Between 1868 and 2020 generations of clergy have been appointed to bring religious instruction to bear on a range of offenders from illegal Christian heretics to Marxist political dissidents war criminals and death row inmates The case of the prison chaplaincy shows that despite constitutional commitments to freedom of religion and separation of religion from state statism remains an enduring feature of mainstream Japanese religious life in the contemporary era

Theorising Religion James A. Beckford, John Walliss, 2006 While religious forces are powerful in numerous societies they have little or no significance for wide swaths of public or private life in other places This book considers the classical roots of ideas about religion that dominated sociological ways of thinking about it for most of the twentieth century Each chapter offers sound reasons for continuing to find theoretical inspiration and challenge in the sociological classics while also seeking ways of enhancing and extending their relevance to religion today

Religion, Law and the Constitution Javier García Oliva, Helen Hall, 2017-08-10 This book examines the existing constitutional and legal system in England Wales and Scotland through the prism of its treatment of religion and belief The study encompasses questions of Church state relations but pushes far beyond these It asks whether the approach to religion which has spread out from establishment to permeate the whole legal framework is a cause of concern or celebration in relation to individual and collective freedoms The primary focus of the work is the synergy between the religious dimension of the juridical system and the fundamental pillars of the Constitution parliamentary sovereignty the rule of law separation of powers and human rights Javier García Oliva and Helen Hall challenge the view that separation between public and religious authorities is the most conducive means of nurturing a free and democratic society in modern Britain The authors explore whether counter intuitively for some the religious dynamic to the legal system actually operates to safeguard liberties and has a role in generating an inclusive and adaptable backdrop for our collective life They suggest that the present paradigm brings benefits for citizens of all shades of religious belief and opinion including Atheist and Humanist perspectives as well as secondary advantages for those with profound beliefs on non religious matters such as pacifism and veganism In support of their contentions García Oliva and Hall examine how the religious dimension of the legal framework operates to further essential constitutional principles in diverse settings ranging from criminal to family law In a groundbreaking move the authors also set the legal discussion alongside its social and cultural context They consider how the theological perspectives of the larger faith traditions might influence members ideas around the key constitutional precepts and they include extracts from interviews which give the personal perspective of more than 100 individuals on contemporary issues of law and religious freedom. These voices are drawn from a range of fields and positions on faith. While the authors are at pains to stress that these sections do not support or advance their legal or theological conclusions, they do provide readers with a human backdrop to the discussion and demonstrate its crucial importance in twenty-first century Britain.

The Oxford Handbook of European Islam Jocelyne Cesari, 2015. For centuries, Muslim countries and Europe have engaged one another through theological dialogues, diplomatic missions, political rivalries, and power struggles. In the last thirty years, due in large part to globalization and migration from Islamic countries to the West, what was previously an engagement across national and cultural boundaries has increasingly become an internalized encounter within Europe itself. Questions of the Hijab in schools, freedom of expression in the wake of the Danish Cartoon crisis, and the role of Shari'a have come to the forefront of contemporary European discourse. The Oxford Handbook of European Islam is the first collection to present a comprehensive approach to the multiple and changing ways Islam has been studied across European countries. Parts one to three address the state of knowledge of Islam and Muslims within a selection of European countries, while presenting a critical view of the most up-to-date data specific to each country. These chapters analyze the immigration cycles and policies related to the presence of Muslims, tackling issues such as discrimination, post-colonial identity, adaptation, and assimilation. The thematic chapters in parts four and five examine secularism, radicalization, Shari'a, Hijab, and Islamophobia, with the goal of synthesizing different national discussions into a more comparative theoretical framework. The Handbook attempts to balance cutting-edge assessment with the knowledge that the content itself will eventually be superseded by events. Featuring eighteen newly commissioned essays by noted scholars in the field, this volume will provide an excellent resource for students and scholars interested in European Studies, immigration, Islamic studies, and the sociology of religion.
