Special Religious Education in Australia and its Value to Contemporary Society Zehavit Gross, Suzanne D. Rutland, 2021-02-22 This book explores the advantages of and challenges concerning Special Religious Education SRE in multicultural Australia and argues for the need for General Religious Education GRE as well Through the lens of the most recent scholarship and drawing on an in depth qualitative study and specific case studies the book examines the current debate on the role of religious education within government schools It addresses key concepts of values education spirituality health and wellbeing and cultural and religious identity It analyses why it is important to retain SRE together with GRE as government policy It explores highly relevant controversial and contested issues regarding SRE including the 30% of Australia's population who declare themselves as having no religion and brings fresh insights to the table While secularization has increased in both the national and international spheres there has also been an increase in fundamentalism within religious beliefs Events such as the September 11 terror attacks and the more recent mass shootings by white supremacists and eco fascists in Christchurch New Zealand and Pittsburgh and San Diego in the USA are reminders that religion is still a major actor in the twenty first century This poses new challenges for the relationship between church and state and demonstrates the need to revisit the role of religious education within government schools While the importance of GRE is generally acknowledged SRE has increasingly come under attack by some researchers and teacher and parent bodies as being inappropriate and contradictory to the values of the postmodern world On the other hand the key stakeholders from all the faith traditions in Australia wish to retain the SRE classes in government schools The book addresses this burning issue and shows that it is relevant not only for Australia but also globally

Missionaries to a Teenage Culture Marisa L. Crawford, Graham M. Rossiter, 1988 International Journal of Religious Education ,1924 Inspiring Faith in Schools Marius Felderhof, 2016-05-23 Inspiring Faith in Schools addresses the privileging of secularism that appears to affect RE in countries influenced by modern western thought The authors argue that a more engaging form of RE would emerge if religious life were to inhabit centre stage Currently religious faith is made to hover in the wings awaiting the call to face the inquisitorial challenge of the modern day enquirer The consequent relationship between pupil and the Divine as the purpose of study is then already intrinsically irreligious as indicated in the Book of Job by putting God in the dock whereas it is the pupil who should be cross examining his or her life What are the ways of exciting and engaging the young so that they begin to entertain the possibility of religious life as a genuine option for themselves Leading scholars in philosophy and theology from the UK Australia Canada and the USA come together to address these questions together with RE experts Marius Felderhof writes an Afterword summing up the challenges faced by such a re visioning of RE

Religious Education ,1924

Tamney, 2002-02-11 The recent growth and popularity of conservative churches contradicts the idea that late modern societies have outgrown the need for such relics of the past as traditionalist religions In this book Joseph Tamney offers an explanation for this this apparent incongruity by looking at the case of growing popular conservative Protestant congregations in the United States His findings represent a synthesis of ideas from supporters of secularization theory and from those who stress the competitive market of churches in America as a factor in
