Interrogating International Relations Jayashree Vivekanandan, 2012-03-12. The book interrogates the disciplinary biases and firewalls that inform mainstream international relations today and problematises the several tropes that have come to typify the strategic histories of post-colonial societies such as India. Questioning a range of long-held cultural representations on India, the book challenges such portrayals and underscores the centrality of context and contingency in any cultural explanation of state behaviour. It argues for a historico-cultural understanding of power and critiques IR's tendency to usher in a selective return of history. Taking two contrasting case studies from medieval Indian history, the book assesses the success and failure of the grand strategy pursued by the Mughal empire under Akbar. The study emphasises his grand strategy of accommodation defined by the interplay of critical variables such as distance and the vast military labour market. The book also looks at his conscious attempt to indigenise power by projecting himself as the personification of the ideal Hindu king. This case study helps to contextualise the many critical transitions that occurred in international relations from medieval empires to the modern state system and from an indigenised experiential understanding of power to its absolute abstract manifestations in the colonial state.

Lambert-Hurley, 2015-10-23 Many consider the autobiography to be a Western genre that represents the self as fully autonomous The contributors to Speaking of the Self challenge this presumption by examining a wide range of women's autobiographical writing from South Asia Expanding the definition of what kinds of writing can be considered autobiographical the contributors analyze everything from poetry songs mystical experiences and diaries to prose fiction architecture and religious treatises The authors they study are just as diverse a Mughal princess an eighteenth century courtesan from Hyderabad a nineteenth century Muslim prostitute in Punjab a housewife in colonial Bengal a Muslim Gandhian devotee of Krishna several female Indian and Pakistani novelists and two male actors who worked as female impersonators The contributors find that in these autobiographies the authors construct their gendered selves in relational terms Throughout they show how autobiographical writing in whatever form it takes provides the means toward more fully understanding the historical social and cultural milieu in which the author performs herself and creates her subjectivity Contributors Asiya Alam Afshan Bokhari Uma Chakravarti Kathryn Hansen Siobhan Lambert Hurley Anshu Malhotra Ritu Menon Shubhra Ray Shweta Sachdeva Jha Sylvia Vatak Divine Sounds from the Heart—Singing Unfettered in their Own Voices Rekha Pande, 2010-09-13 Recent years have seen a sea change in the way history is written and also in the way our conceptions of the past are being rewritten In traditional historiography women's articulation is often marginalized and dominated by male voices Through centuries of patriarchal control women negotiated many layers and levels of existence working out different forms of resistance which have often gone unnoticed Bhakti was one such medium Religion provided the space in the medieval period and women saints embraced bhakti to define their own truths in voices that question society family and relationships For all these women bhaktas the rejection of the male power that they were tied to in subordinate relationship became the terrain for struggle self assertion and alternative seeking Most of these women lived during the period from 12th to 17th Century While the dominant mode of worship in bhakti was prostration to a deity like a feudal lord the women bhaktas idea of God as a lover a husband and a friend came as a breath of fresh air The individual outpourings and the voices of these women who had the courage to sing unfettered in their own voices refused to melt in the din of the feudal scene which was largely patriarchal This book will be useful to scholars interested in Feminist History Comparative
