Looking West Loleen Berdahl, Roger Gibbins, 2014-02-24 Although a history of protest politics has done so much to define western Canada and to place it outside the Canadian mainstream the aspirations and frustrations that animated western discontent over the years have been replaced by a new reality the West is in and many of the levers of national economic and political power rest in western Canadian hands The protest tradition has yielded a dynamic region that leads rather than reacts to national economic social and political change The westward shift of the Canadian economy and demography is likely to be an enduring structural change that reflects and is reinforced by the transformation of the continental and global economies At the same time western Canada faces major challenges including finding a place for a sustainable resource economy in a rapidly changing global environment establishing a full and modern partnership with Aboriginal peoples and creating urban environments that will attract and retain human capital None of these challenges are unique to the West but they all play out with great force and great immediacy in western Canada

Erimtan,2008-03-30 The Tulip Age a concept that described the beginning of the Ottoman Empire s westward inclination in the eighteenth century was an idea proposed by Ottoman historian Ahmed Refik in 1912 In the first reassessment of the origins of this concept Can Erimtan argues the Tulip Age was an important template for various political and ideological concerns of early twentieth century Turkish governments The concept is most reflective of the 1930s Republican leadership s attempt to disengage Turkey s population from its Islamic culture and past stressing the virtues of progress modernity and secularism It was only the death of Ataturk in 1938 that precipitated a hesitant revival of Islam in Turkey s public life and a state sponsored re invigoration of research into Turkey s Ottoman past In this exciting reassessment Erimtan shows us that the trope of the Tulip Age corresponds more to Turkish society s desire to re orientate itself to the Occident throughout the twentieth century rather than to early eighteenth century Ottoman realities Looking east looking west Bill Slee,Chen
