The Routledge International Handbook of Religious Education Derek Davis, Elena Miroshnikova, 2013-02-01 How and what to teach about religion is controversial in every country The Routledge International Handbook of Religious Education is the first book to comprehensively address the range of ways that major countries around the world teach religion in public and private educational institutions It discusses how three models in particular seem to dominate the landscape Countries with strong cultural traditions focused on a majority religion tend to adopt an identification model where instruction is provided only in the tenets of the majority religion often to the detriment of other religions and their adherents Countries with traditions that differentiate church and state tend to adopt a separation model thus either offering instruction in a wide range of religions or in some cases teaching very little about religion intentionally leaving it to religious institutions and the home setting to provide religious instruction Still other countries attempt managed pluralism in which neither one nor many but rather a limited handful of major religious traditions are taught Inevitably there are countries which do not fit any of these dominant models and the range of methods touched upon in this book will surprise even the most enlightened reader Religious instruction by educational institutions in 53 countries and regions of the world are explored by experts native to each country These chapters discuss Legal parameters in terms of subjective versus objective instruction in religion Constitutional statutory social and political contexts to religious approaches Distinctions between the kinds of instruction permitted in elementary and secondary schools versus what is allowed in institutions of higher learning Regional assessments which provide a welcome overview and comparison This comprehensive and authoritative volume will appeal to educators scholars religious leaders politicians and others interested in how religion and education interface around the world

The Fourth 'R' Veronica King, 2004 A multifaceted approach seemed appropriate for this study the purpose of which was to investigate the teaching of Catholic Religious Education in Early Years The methodology used was eclectic and designed to accommodate the exploratory nature of the investigation The elements of the study consisted of activities with the children participating in the study interviews with the diocesan Re co ordinator principals teachers and parents in conjunction with questionnaires for teachers and second class pupils Other elements of the study involved surveys of classrooms and schools and data obtained from available documents and religious textbooks The results of the children s activities demonstrated that the majority of the Irish Catholic children studied have a positive attitude toward religious education The comparison of the current Irish Catholic RE programme with other programmes showed that the programme is child centred and attempts to foster children s faith Interviews with the principals teachers and parents also suggested a positive attitude toward RE on the part of the significant adults in these children s lives The children s attitudes were interpreted as potential interest waiting to be developed The study concluded that a partnership approach to Catholic religious education is now needed This partnership should include children parents teachers clergy and the local parish community and is needed to support parents in their role as primary educators of their children especially with respect to religious education Finally some recommendations are made with regard to the development of a more home and parish based religious education for young children EBOOK: FIRST YEARS AT SCHOOL Angela Anning, 1997-01-16 Review of 1st edition I found the whole account a model of clarity with a good blend of theory and practice which many authors would do well to note Ted Wragg TES The First Years at School 2nd Edn is a practical and reflective discussion of the education of 4 to 8 year olds based on a sympathetic recognition of the complexities of being an early years teacher Angela Anning begins by reviewing the historical and ideological traditions of British infant and primary schools tracing how we have reached the position where teachers feel themselves to be torn between child centered and utilitarian demands in educating young children She then provides a detailed and authoritative critique of recent thinking about the cognitive social and emotional development of children and explores the complexities of teachers roles She discusses the organization of the classroom the structuring of learning in the school day and the content of the curriculum She tackles the implications of the series of changes in the National Curriculum Orders and the national assessment systems for seven year olds and their impact on pre fives and children with special educational needs The second edition brings the debate about the post Dearing Key Stage One curriculum and its implications for pre school education bang up to date This will be vital reading for both student and practising teachers of young children Early Childhood Jewish Education Sigal Achituv, Meir Muller, Shelley T.
