

Nurturing Together

Supporting caregivers during their children's early years

Caregivers play a crucial role in children's healthy development

The nurturing relationships that parents and other caregivers form with young children are crucial to a child's development, laying a solid foundation for long-term physical and mental health. These bonds are especially important for helping children in crisis-affected settings build resilience in the face of adversity. Evidence shows that a caring, nurturing relationship with an adult can be an important protective factor for these children.

Programs designed specifically for parents and other caregivers can support them in playing this critical role—providing information and guidance on how to interact and play in healthy and stimulating ways. Evidence shows that these programs have an effect, improving children's cognitive, motor, language, and socioemotional development. Programs that support caregivers in forming nurturing relationships with their children can also mitigate some of the negative effects of stress and trauma early in life. And benefits extend beyond children: research shows that early childhood development programs aimed at supporting caregivers can improve caregivers' own mental health as well, and caregivers often report that playing with their children is an important factor in their own happiness.

,2000 IAP Recent Advances in Pediatrics - 2 PSN Menon, Alok Gupta, 2022-06-30 Social and Physical Ecologies for Child Resilience: Wisdom from Asia and Africa Haibin Li, Guanglun Michael Mu, Linda Theron, 2023-11-16 Since Emmy Werner and her team discovered on the Hawaiian island of Kauai the invincible children who fared well despite exposure to significant household risks there has been proliferating research on child resilience as a positive response to adverse conditions. The past five decades have seen significant advancements in and diverse approaches to understanding challenges, facilitative factors and positive outcomes in the resilience process that involve children. Despite existing and continuously emerging modelings and framings, there appears a common understanding that child resilience unfolds through the interactions between individuals and the environments surrounding them. This Research Topic therefore takes an ecological approach to child resilience. While ecologies constitute social spaces that nurture child resilience, they can also refer to the physical environments surrounding children. There has been robust empirical evidence suggesting resilience is a shared capacity of the individual and the social ecology e.g. families, schools and communities, and more recently of the individual and the physical ecology e.g. the built or natural environment.

Improving early childhood development World Health Organization, 2020-04-03. Enabling young children to achieve their full developmental potential is a human right and an essential requisite for sustainable development. Given the critical importance of enabling children to make the best start in life, the health sector among other sectors has an important role and responsibility to support nurturing care for early childhood development. This guideline provides direction for strengthening policies and programmes to better address early childhood development. It is primarily the family who provides the nurturing care that children need to develop in the earliest years. Many parents and other caregivers need support to put this into practice. Therefore, the guideline contains four recommendations aimed at caregivers, health professionals and other workers who can assist them, as well as policy makers and other stakeholders. The recommendations relate to: i) providing responsive care and activities for early learning during the first 3 years of life; ii) including responsive care and early learning as part of interventions for optimal nutrition of infants and young children; and iii) integrating psychosocial interventions to support maternal mental health into early childhood health and development services.
