Possession Ecstasy And Law In Ewe Voodoo:

Possession, Ecstasy, and Law in Ewe Voodoo Judy Rosenthal, 1998 As a new resident of Togo in 1985 Judy Rosenthal witnessed her first Gorovodu trance ritual Over the next eleven years she studied this voodoo in West Africa s Ewe populations of coastal Ghana Togo and Benin an area once called the Slave Coast The result is Possession Ecstasy and Law in Ewe Voodoo an ethnography of spirit possession that focuses on law and morality in medecine Vodou orders Gorovodu is not a doctrinal set but rather a linguistic moral and spiritual community with both real and imagined aspects In medecine Vodou possession the deities evoked are spirits of bought people from the savanna regions slaves who worked for southern coastal lineages often marrying into Ewe families Drumming and dancing rituals replete with voluptuous trances and gender reversals bring these foreign spirits back into Ewe communities to protect worshippers heal the sick and troubled arbitrate disputes and enjoy themselves as they did before they died Rosenthal employs Bakhtin s theory of carnival to interpret the openly festive element of Gorovodu The changeable nature of the religion echoes the lack of boundaries of the Gorovodu family and the residents belief that communal and individual identity are fluid rather than fixed Numerous name changes early in this century indicated a strategy for resisting colonial control Writing from a background of anthropology Rosenthal carefully monitors her own role as narrator in the book aware of the cultural distance between her and the Africans she is writing about She intends this ethnography to mirror the texts of voodoo itself a body of signifiers and meanings with which the reader must interact in order to make sense of it

Sacred Sites and the Colonial Encounter

Sandra E. Greene, 2002-05-14 Greene gives the reader a vivid sense of the Anlo encounter with western thought and Christian beliefs and the resulting erasures transferences adaptations and alterations in their perceptions of place space and the body Emmanuel Akyeampong Sandra E Greene reconstructs a vivid and convincing portrait of the human and physical environment of the 19th century Anlo Ewe people of Ghana and brings history and memory into contemporary context Drawing on her extensive fieldwork early European accounts and missionary archives and publications Greene shows how ideas from outside forced sacred and spiritual meanings associated with particular bodies of water burial sites sacred towns and the human body itself to change in favor of more scientific and regulatory views Anlo responses to these colonial ideas involved considerable resistance and over time the Anlo began to attribute selective varied and often contradictory meanings to the body and the spaces they inhabited Despite these multiple meanings Greene shows that the Anlo were successful in forging a consensus on how to manage their identity environment and community

Female Voices from an Ewe Dance-drumming Community in Ghana James Burns, 2017-07-05 Ewe dance drumming has been extensively studied throughout the history of ethnomusicology but up to now there has not been a single study that addresses Ewe female musicians James Burns redresses this deficiency through a detailed ethnography of a group of female musicians from the Dzigbordi community dance drumming club from the rural town of Dzodze located in South Eastern Ghana Dzigbordi was specifically chosen because of the author's long association with the group members and because it is part of a genre known as adekede or female songs of redress where women musicians critique gender relations in society Burns uses audio and video interviews recordings of rehearsals and performances and detailed collaborative analyses of song texts dance routines and performance practice to address important methodological shifts in ethnomusicology that outline a more humanistic perspective of music cultures This perspective encompasses the inter linkages between history social processes and individual creative artists The voices of Dzighbordi women provide us not only with a more complete picture of Ewe music making they further allow us to better understand the relationship between culture social life and individual creativity The book will therefore appeal to those interested in African Studies Gender Studies and Oral Literature as well as ethnomusicology Includes downloadable resources
