Overcoming the Two Cultures Richard E Lee Jr,Immanuel Wallerstein,2015-12-03 This book tells the story of how the very idea of two cultures the so called divorce between science and the humanities was a creation of the modern world system. The contributors working from a common research framework trace the divorce of facts and values as part of the transition from feudalism to capitalism. This led to a polarization between universalist science and the particularist humanities and finally to the creation of the social sciences as an uneasy intermediary in this epistemological debate. The book addresses the contemporary attempts to overcome the division between the two cultures that emerge from science: feminism, race and ethnic studies, cultural studies and ecology, ending with an analysis of the culture wars and the science wars.

Culture and Neural Frames of Cognition and Communication Shihui Han, Ernst Pöppel, 2011-01-06. Cultural neuroscience combines brain imaging techniques such as functional magnetic resonance imaging and event-related brain potentials with methods of social and cultural psychology to investigate whether and how cultures influence the neural mechanisms of perception, attention, emotion, social cognition and other human cognitive processes. The findings of cultural neuroscience studies improve our understanding of the relation between human brain function and sociocultural contexts and help to reframe the big question of nature versus nurture. This book is organized so that two chapters provide general views of the relation between biological evolution, cultural evolution and recent cultural neuroscience studies while other chapters focus on several aspects of human cognition that have been shown to be strongly influenced by sociocultural factors such as self-concept, representation, language, processes, emotion, time, perception and decision making. The main goal of this work is to address how thinking actually takes place and how the underlying neural mechanisms are affected by culture and identity.

Neuropsychology of Children in Africa Michael J. Boivin, Bruno Giordani, 2013-05-13. Increasingly, global humanitarian efforts are focusing on improving the lives of children. And among the developing world, the African nations are particularly affected by extreme weather conditions, devastating pandemics and armed conflict. Neurocognitive science offers significant avenues toward bringing needed aid to the continent while creating a template for helping children worldwide. The studies in Neuropsychology of Children in Africa clearly illustrate how the brain develops and adjusts in the face of adversity. Contributors span assessment approaches and public health, risk factors and represent established topics and emerging lines of research including biocultural constructs and genomic technologies. Together, these chapters argue for methodology that is culturally sensitive, scientifically rigorous, consistent and sustainable. And although the focus is pediatric, the book takes a lifespan approach to prevention and intervention, modeling a universal framework for understanding neurocognitive development. Included in the coverage: Assessment of very young children in Africa in the context of HIV; Psychosocial aspects of malnutrition among African children; Assessment of neuropsychological outcomes in pediatric severe malaria; Neurodisability screening using the Ten Questions questionnaire; The neuropsychology of sickle cell disease in West African children; Computerized Cognitive
