Report Of The Committee On The Ethics Of Genetic Modification And Food Use:

Report of the Committee on the Ethics of Genetic Modification and Food Use Great Britain. Committee on the Ethics of Genetic Modification and Food Use, Great Britain. Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, 1993 There are ethical issues beyond those simply of safety which might arise from the marketing and consumption of food derived from genetic modification programmes In particular ethical concerns relating to food use include the transfer of human genes to food animals the transfer of genes from animals whose flesh is forbidden for use as food by certain religious groups the transfer of animal genes into food crops which may be of particular concern to some vegetarians the use of organisms containing human genes as animal feed The views of a wide variety of organizations were sought to consider these issues This is the Committee's concise report which includes their final recommendations Genetic Modification in the Food Industry Susan Harlander, Sibel Roller, 2012-12-06 Although the true economic impact of genetic modifications is yet to be realized the potential of this new technology to benefit the food processing industry and to improve food quality is enormous Specific genetically modified whole foods and food ingredients that have recently become available or are about to become available are described and discussed in relation to their technical performance and consumer acceptance The regulatory ethical and communication issues in food biotechnology are also reviewed As the products of gene technology come on stream decisions need to be made as to whether or not to use them Yet many food industry professionals have little or no background in biotechnology and have a limited concept of possible applications in foods Therefore this book aims to foster a greater understanding of the benefits and potential pitfalls of this new technology Biotechnology, Patents and Morality Sigrid Sterckx, 2017-11-01 This title was first published in 2000 This work documents an international and interdisciplinary workshop on the ethical aspects of the patenting of biotechnological inventions including genes plants and animals The public perception is discussed along with how these perceptions relate to ethical social and cultural factors The legal framework in Europe is laid out by several experts in the field of patent law and the situation in the US is also briefly described This edition also includes a general discussion of three important theories called upon to justify the patent system the natural rights argument the distributive justice argument and the utilitarian argument The chapter about the European Directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions has been updated A selection of provisions from the August 1997 draft as well as the final text of the Directive as adopted on 12 May 1998 are discussed and commented upon The patent provisions of the TRIPs Agreement the Agreement on Trade Related aspects of Intellectual Property rights concluded in 1994 as an Annex to the Agreement Establishing the World Trade Organization are also discussed and criticized paying particular attention to the implications for biotechnology patents Finally the question is asked whether the developing countries stand to gain anything from TRIPs A look at the results of empirical research conducted by commentators on the economics of patenting reveals that the new patent regime may prove to entail significant costs for the developing countries

This second edition also contains material on the EU Directive on biotechnology patents adopted in May 1998 justificatory theories of the patent system and the TRIP s agreement on Trade Related aspects of Intellectual Property rights concluded in the GATT WTO framework

Acceptable Genes? Conrad G. Brunk, Harold Coward, 2009-10-30 Modern biotechnology has surpassed science fiction with such feats as putting fish genes in tomatoes to create a more cold resistant crop While the environmental and health concerns over such genetically modified foods have been the subject of public debate religious and spiritual viewpoints have been given short shrift This book seeks to understand the moral and religious attitudes of groups within pluralistic societies whose traditions and beliefs raise for them unique questions about food and dietary practice What questions are there for kosher Jews halal Muslims and vegetarian Hindus about food products containing transgenes from prohibited sources How do these foods impact the cultural practices and spiritual teachings of indigenous peoples Concerns from the above traditions as well as Christianity Buddhism Chinese religion and ethical vegetarianism are included Contributors look at the ethical context of each tradition and also include information from focus groups This enlightening work concludes with recommendations for the labeling of genetically modified foods

Food, Science and Society P.S. Belton, Teresa Belton, 2013-06-29 There is widespread concern amongst consumers about the safety and acceptability of food and there are clearly communication gaps between consumers many food professionals and food industry This book offers accounts of the two way nature of this difficult communication process and steps that can be made to bridge these communication gaps in a variety of social and cultural environments Individual chapters of the book analyze the roles of science culture and risk perception and of mass media and attitudes towards eating An additional section describes the interface between scientists and lay people with regard to policy making and agricultural practice
