The Magic Glasses Rachmiel Tobesman, 1995-12-01 Storybook with activities for children involved in custody visitation separation and divorce Ten original stories from Master Storyteller Long before pen was set to paper fairy tales legends and stories existed as a means to transfer knowledge from one generation to another Spreading knowledge through stories was both entertaining and educational Religious leaders throughout time have used many metaphors and parables to teach valuable lessons of morals and ethics Storytelling is a sharing experience When a parent tells a story they show a willingness to be vulnerable to share ideas and feelings That kind of sensitivity invites children to listen with open minds and hearts Enjoying a story together creates a common experience Storytelling properly done creates a relaxed restful feeling It establishes a very special relationship between parent and child Stories can be used for any type of problem and for any age The use of such stories is a powerful tool to help children to cope with the fear confusion and uncertainty of the separation and divorce process Because stories appear to have the capacity to make a dramatic and positive difference in many of the children use of stories may well become true gifts of love Children's Books in Print R R Bowker
