Liberating the National History Curriculum Josna Pankhania,2017-11-01 Once there were bards who sang the songs which kept the listeners in touch with their past They reminded them of the heroes who once walked among them and whose legacy provided a sense of shared greatness and national identity Later the bards became historians and history teachers and English history became a glorious roll call of those who had gone out and created an Empire and at the same time spread education and enlightenment But recent doubts have raised questions about partiality and perhaps there were losses suffered by the Empire's people Perhaps their heritage should be our heritage and therefore a fit subject for history to deal with Originally published in 1994 this book argues that the curriculum can be legitimately used to teach students the history of oppressed groups It is important to note that Pankhania manages to do this not in a divisive spirit but with the intent to seek unity for the future by understanding and accepting the positive and negative aspects of a collective past

Feminism And Social Justice In Education Kathleen Weiler,2005-08-04 After more than twenty years of feminist education research policy development and innovative school practice it seems appropriate to evaluate the impact and significance of this world wide struggle for social justice in education At the same time the recent restructuring of educational provision whether in the name of sexual equality or the ideologies of the New Right also requires a considered response from Those Committed To Promoting Greater Social Equality This Collection offers a unique opportunity to host an international forum on contemporary thinking and practice not just within different national contexts but for feminism more generally In adopting a critical feminist approach the chapters re establish such egalitarian traditions as radical feminism black feminism and socialist feminism and address such themes as the interrelation between social class race and gender and the ways these articulate with feminist educational practice In gathering together leading educators from five different countries all committed to the project of social transformation this book represents the shifting concerns of the feminist theoretical debate and helps formulate feminist educational agendas more suited to the political and economic conditions which prevail in the 1990s Medieval Realms, 1066-1500 John F.
