Repair Or Revenge Victims And Restorative Justice:

Repair Or Revenge Heather Strang, Director Centre for Restorative Justice Research School of Social Sciences Heather Strang, (Re, 2002) This book addresses the role of victims in our criminal justice system and the shortcomings they perceive in the way they are treated. It examines whether restorative justice can offer them more justice than they receive from the formal court based system. Research into the shortcomings of the court based system has identified a number of issues that victims want to address. In brief they want a less formal process where their views count more information about both the processing and the outcome of their case a greater opportunity for participation in the way their case is dealt with fairer and more respectful treatment and emotional as well as material restoration as an outcome. Over the past three decades the victim movement worldwide has agitated for an enhanced role for victims in criminal justice. Despite some successes it appears that structural as well as political factors may mean that victims have won as much as they are likely to gain from formal justice. A series of randomized controlled trials in Canberra known as the Reintegrative Shaming Experiments RISE has provided an opportunity to compare rigorously the impact on victims of court based justice with a restorative justice program known as conferencing. In these experiments middle range property and violent offences committed by young offenders were assigned either to court as they would normally have been treated or to a conference. Empirical evidence from RISE examined in this book suggests that the restorative alternative of conferencing more often than court has the capacity to give victims what they say they want in achieving meaningful victim participation and restoration especially emotional restoration.

Repair Or Revenge Heather Strang, 2002 Restorative Justice Marian Liebmann, 2007-04-15 Drawing on many years experience of working in victim support probation mediation and restorative practices Marian Liebmann uses pertinent case examples to illustrate how restorative justice can be used effectively to work with crime and its effects. Liebmann also examines how restorative justice is practised around the world.

A Restorative Approach to Family Violence Anne Hayden, Loraine Gelsthorpe, Allison Morris, 2016-03-16 This volume provides an essential update on current thinking practice and research into the use of restorative justice in the area of family violence. It contains contemporary empirical theoretical and practical perspectives on the use of restorative justice for intimate partner and family violence including sexual violence and elder abuse. Whilst raising issues relating to the implications of reporting it provides a fresh look at victims issues as well as providing accounts of those who have participated in restorative justice processes and who have been victims of abusive relationships. Contributions are included from a wide range of perspectives to provide a balanced approach that is not simply polemic or advocating. Rather the book genuinely raises the issue for debate with the advantage of bringing into the open new research which has not been widely published previously. Given its unique experience in the development of restorative justice the book includes empirical studies relating to New Zealand contextualized within the global situation by the inclusion of perspectives on practices in the UK Australia and North America. This book will be key

Assisting Victims of Terrorism Rianne Letschert, Ines Staiger, Antony Pemberton, 2009-12-04 The fight against terrorism is receiving increased awareness due to recent world wide large scale terrorist acts and only since then has some attention been directed specifically to victims of terrorism Existing legal instruments of international bodies like the European Union the Council of Europe and the United Nations concerning victims of terrorism are relatively abstract or include victims of terrorism under the broader heading of victims of crime in general In addition policies and legislation relating to victims of crime or victims of terrorism vary widely on the domestic level Against this background the European Union commissioned a project that should aim to develop more extensive standards for the aid and assistance of victims of terrorism at the European level This study provides the basis from which more extensive standards could be derived The study focuses particularly on developing standards in the field of continuing assistance access to justice administration of justice and compensation to victims of terrorism A novel feature of the approach is that also the possible utility of restorative justice approaches is examined An important question to address was whether there is a real need to adopt specific standards for victims of terrorism thereby implying that their needs might differ from victims of ordinary crime

Just Interests Robyn Holder, 2018 Just Interests Victims Citizens and the Potential for Justice contributes to extended conversations about the idea of justice who has it who doesn't and what it means in the everyday setting of criminal justice It challenges the usual representation of people victimized by violence only as victims and re positions them as members of a political community Departing from conventional approaches that see victims as a problem for law to contain Robyn Holder draws on democratic principles of inclusion and deliberation to argue for the unique opportunity of criminal justice to enlist the capacity of citizens to rise to the demands of justice in their ordinary lives
