PublishedPublished. Click to unpublish. Edit Manage

This assignment requires that you first invest yourself in a set of assignments related to argumentation, research methods, research writing, and documentation. These preliminary assignments (such as the Preliminary Zotero Research Report) will prepare you to write a powerful research-based argumentation essay by which you can demonstrate your ability to

1. analyze others' writing from a variety of perspectives and make thoughtful evaluative decisions based on such analysis; and
2. develop your own effective and original written communication.

Read everything below with care and following all hyperlinks will help ensure that you fulfill all the requirements for this assignment.

Length and Subject Area

Using your Preliminary Zotero Research Report as a starting point, write a 2000-word, argumentation essay on any debatable topic related to climate change. Your paper must support a formal thesis statement with properly documented research materials. Take care to ensure that your topic is properly narrowed or focused so that you do not end up writing in vague generalizations.

Use of Conventions of Argumentation

Your paper must have a formal thesis statement.

Your paper must also use all three traditional appeals: logos, pathos, and ethos. This means that your paper must exhibit

- good reasoning by thoroughly analyzing arguments both in favor of and in opposition to your own view and by avoiding logical fallacies;
- a strong connection with readers' emotions through examples and analyses that activate shared, universal values; and
- appeals to credibility by
 - using the views of bona fide experts and/or credible, accurate, and current web sites to support your argument;
 - objectively acknowledging and analyzing the views of those who oppose your argument (i.e., you may refute, accept, and/or overrule your opposition's arguments, but you may not ignore them);
 - maintaining an objective tone and point of view; and

Richard Andrews

Research And Argumentation:

Rhetorical Argumentation Christopher W. Tindale, 2004-05-27 The study of argumentation has primarily focused on logical and dialectical approaches with minimal attention given to the rhetorical facets of argument Rhetorical Argumentation Principles of Theory and Practice approaches argumentation from a rhetorical point of view and demonstrates how logical and dialectical considerations depend on the rhetorical features of the argumentative situation Throughout this text author Christopher W Tindale identifies how argumentation as a communicative practice can best be understood by its rhetorical features Rhetorical Argumentation uniquely presents argumentation through the idea of an invitational rhetoric by encouraging readers to think about the ways in which they encounter arguments The book explores the processes involved in the argumentative exchanges between arguers and audiences thus emphasizing the collaborative nature of the arguer audience relationship in the argumentative situation That is argument is presented not as a set of ideas imposed upon a passive audience but rather as a dynamic exchange wherein the audience is involved in self persuasion Key Features Explores the ancient foundations of rhetoric from Aristotle to the relatively contemporary works of Perelman and Olbrechts Tytca Toulmin and Bakhtin Includes numerous examples illustrating the ways in which the reasoning within arguments involves the audience from premise through to conclusion Presents the idea of dialogism drawn from the theories of Mikhail Bakhtin to create a more dynamic and interactive sense of the argumentative context Examines current theory as well as the historical relationship between argument and rhetoric Provides detailed discussions of topics such as nature of the dialogical rhetorical context audiences and standards of appraisal Rhetorical Argumentation is designed to provide advanced undergraduate and graduate students with a clear understanding of the rhetorical view of argumentation and how it can be effective in contemporary society The book is an ideal text for courses in Communication Rhetoric Argumentation Informal Logic Critical Thinking and Conflict Resolution Research and Argumentation Williams, 1998-03-21

Argumentation in Higher Education Richard Andrews, 2009-09-10 Argumentation in Higher Education offers professors lecturers and researchers informative guidance for teaching effective argumentation skills to their undergraduate and graduate students This professional guide aims to make the complex topic of argumentation open and transparent Grounded in empirical research and theory but with student voices heard strongly throughout this book fills the gap of argumentation instruction for the undergraduate and graduate level Written to enlighten even the most experienced professor this text contributes to a better understanding of the demands of speaking writing and visual argumentation in higher education and will undoubtedly inform and enhance course design The book argues for a more explicit treatment of argument the product and argumentation the process in higher education so that the ground rules of the academic discipline in question are made clear Each chapter concludes with practical exercises for staff development use Topics discussed include The importance of argument The current state of argumentation in higher education Generic skills in argumentation

The balance between generic and discipline specific skills Information communication technologies and visual argumentation How can we best teach argumentation so that students feel fully empowered in their academic composition Professors new and experienced lecturers researchers professional developers and writing coaches worldwide grappling with this question will find this accessible text to be an extremely valuable resource Richard Andrews is Professor in English at the Institute of Education University of London

Why Good Argument is Critical to Useful Research Mike Metcalfe, 2007 Writers like Rorty Popper Dewey and Feyerabend suggest that rather than searching for more and more exacting and rigorous rules for how to undertake well justified research we need to be concerned with communities of doubters These if adequately applying dialectic argument will act to challenge unjustified knowledge claims and so save us all from being deceived This book encourages doubt by providing over a dozen ways to critique research especially where that research results in knowledge claims about human activities Each chapter provides another pragmatic conception of knowledge used to question the assumptions behind whatever research work you have just read Therefore the book offers a way of learning about your own discipline specific research literature while also learning how to design a well justified research report

Perspectives on Scientific Argumentation Myint Swe Khine, 2011-09-30 Argumentation arriving at conclusions on a topic through a process of logical reasoning that includes debate and persuasion has in recent years emerged as a central topic of discussion among science educators and researchers There is now a firm and general belief that fostering argumentation in learning activities can develop students critical thinking and reasoning skills and that dialogic and collaborative inquiries are key precursors to an engagement in scientific argumentation It is also reckoned that argumentation helps students assimilate knowledge and generate complex meaning The consensus among educators is that involving students in scientific argumentation must play a critical role in the education process itself Recent analysis of research trends in science education indicates that argumentation is now the most prevalent research topic in the literature This book attempts to consolidate contemporary thinking and research on the role of scientific argumentation in education Perspectives on Scientific Argumentation brings together prominent scholars in the field to share the sum of their knowledge about the place of scientific argumentation in teaching and learning Chapters explore scientific argumentation as a means of addressing and solving problems in conceptual change reasoning knowledge building and the promotion of scientific literacy Others interrogate topics such as the importance of language discursive practice social interactions and culture in the classroom The material in this book which features intervention studies discourse analyses classroom based experiments anthropological observations and design based research will inform theoretical frameworks and changing pedagogical practices as well as encourage new avenues of research
