ImageCLEF Henning Müller, Paul Clough, Thomas Deselaers, Barbara Caputo, 2010-08-20 The pervasive creation and consumption of content especially visual content is ingrained into our modern world We re constantly consuming visual media content in printed form and in digital form in work and in leisure pursuits Like our cave man forefathers we use pictures to record things which are of importance to us as memory cues for the future but nowadays we also use pictures and images to document processes we use them in engineering in art in science in medicine in entertainment and we also use images in advertising Moreover when images are in digital format either scanned from an analogue format or more often than not born digital we can use the power of our computing and networking to exploit images to great effect Most of the technical problems associated with creating compressing storing transmitting rendering and protecting image data are already solved We use cepted standards and have tremendous infrastructure and the only outstanding ch lenges apart from managing the scale issues associated with growth are to do with locating images That involves analysing them to determine their content clas fying them into related groupings and searching for images To overcome these challenges we currently rely on image metadata the description of the images ther captured automatically at creation time or manually added afterwards

Canon Constitution and Canon Change in Children's Literature Bettina

Kümmerling-Meibauer, Anja Muller, 2016-12-01 This volume focuses on the de canonization processes in children's literature considering the construction and cultural historical changes of canons in different children's literatures Chapters by international experts in the field explore a wide range of different children's literatures from Great Britain Germany Scandinavia the Low Countries Eastern and Central Europe as well as from Non European countries such as Australia Israel and the United States Situating the inquiry within larger literary and cultural studies conversations about canonicity the contributors assess representative authors and works that have encountered changing fates in the course of canon history Particular emphasis is given to sociological canon theories which have so far been under represented in canon research in children's literature The volume therefore relates historical changes in the canon of children's literature not only to historical changes in concepts of childhood but to more encompassing political social economic cultural and ideological shifts This volume's comparative approach takes cognizance of the fact that if canon formation is an important cultural factor in nation building processes a comparative study is essential to assessing transnational processes in canon formation This book thus renders evident the structural similarities between patterns and strategies of canon formation emerging in different children's literatures

Normal Instructor, 1929

On the Wallaby through Victoria E. M. Clowes, 2016-09-27

This is not supposed to be a national or political history of Victoria When I was asked to write something about the country which has extended its hospitality to me and given me bread and cheese sometimes no cheese it is true and more often than not no butter but still always bread and an ever increasing appetite I must confess I felt frankly scared There is a very good if somewhat vulgar expression in use out here which speaks of anyone who attempts what is beyond them as biting off more than they can chew And the thought frightened me There seemed to be so many people who had lived all their life in the country and were therefore much more capable of writing about it than I could ever possibly hope to be However I found that other fools rushed in who had been here for even a shorter period than myself who had never participated in any way in the true life of the country or depended on it for their own life which after all teaches one more than anything else ever can about a place I may not be an p viangel I thought still I know it which is one point in my favour and after all eight years can scarcely be described as a rush Besides every proverb and popular saying seems to be balanced by another which is completely contradictory and while it may be true that fools rush in where angels fear to tread it is also true that lookers on see most of the game and perhaps score somewhat in the freshness of their impressions and in their facilities for comparison As it is I can only write about Victoria as I know it There are many mistakes that I may have made through my inability to see all sides of a question but they are at least honest mistakes and not the deliberate misstatement of facts from which Australia has so often suffered
