

POLITICS WEEK 5 NOTES

Discipline based approaches to the study of politics

- Approaches that are drawn from other disciplines
- Modern disciplinary knowledges are never able to give you a complete picture of phenomenon or problem being studied
- Kind of questions are chosen by those within the discipline
- Discipline based approaches emerge at the intersection of political science and another discipline
- Eg. Politics+ Economics= political economy approach
 - Benefit is that it enables political science to give priority to an economic view, an analysis of the economy through political science
 - Marxism + liberalism
- Discipline based approaches suffer the same limitations as other disciplines being studied
- Eg. Politics + psychology= political behaviour/political dynamics
 - How particular groups/people behave in politics
 - Political behaviour is necessary to conduct a poll
 - Maybe politics can help understand the behaviour of people(benefit)
- Eg. Politics + sociology= political sociology
 - Interrelation between human beings and society
 - Function at the level of abstraction(politics)
 - Interrelation has impact on nature of politics
 - What is the nature of interrelation between men and women in politics, helps us understand
 - what are the conditions of possibility that enables politicians to make statements that deal with women in such a disapproving manner and makes them possible
- eg. Politics + philosophy= political philosophy/political theory
 - philosophy is an enquiry into epistemology
 - concerned with the normative good of society
 - enabled us to be concerned with the politics of knowledge production
 - philosophy asks what constitutes knowledge
 - where did the knowledge come from/what does that knowledge exclude /why do we consider it
 - a return of normative questions
 - helped legitimate political theory and normative questions which had been pushed out of the centre by the behavioural revolution
- Politics + geography= political geography
 - Two types: human geography(social science)/natural geography(science)
 - Enabled us to understand things that we possibly wouldn't have understood without the intervention of geography
