

"The Wife of Bath's Tale"

"the wife of bath's tale"

Long ago, King Arthur (a king every Briton loved) ruled. During his time, the land was full of ladies. The King Queen and her people danced on every green meadow (or so they heard). Hundreds of years ago, but no-one saw ladies anymore. Instead, all they hear are their prayers. These ladies search the countryside, blessing all types of buildings, and that's why there are no ladies. Now all people see are their walking around, saying prayers. Women can go walk around safely: the only danger is the filch, who won't hurt them - he'll only take their virtue.

Now if so happened, I began to say, Long, long ago in good King Arthur's day, There was a knight who was a lousy guy. One day as he came riding from the river he saw a maiden walking all forlorn. Ahead of him, gone as she was born, And of that maiden, spite of all she said, By very force he took her maidenhead. This act of violence made such a stir, So much petitioning to the king for her, That he condemned the knight to lose his head By course of law. He was as good as dead (it seems that then the statutes took that view). But that the queen, and other ladies too, Implored the king to exercise his grace So compassionately, he gave the queen the case And granted her his life, and she could choose whether to show him mercy or refuse.

What is the setting of the tale?

What is the Wife of Bath's attitude towards filch?

What is the knight's punishment?

What does this reveal about the time period in which the story is set?
