Cole,2020-11-29 I was born in London in 1962 I spent the first 12 years of my life in a children s home struggling not only with the fact that my parents had abandonned me but also trying to cope with being of Caribbean decent I was sent to Jamaica at the age of twelve to be with my Grandmother Auntie Brother and Sister all of whom I was to meet for the first time In Jamaica I learnt to adapt to a different way of life and culture I saw my father for the first time and lost a good friend in the Island s capitol Kingston during the violent civil unrest of the late seventies and early eighties I returned to England in 1982 and after living a play boy type of life for a few years I decided to seek out my mother and find out what went wrong The years which followed took me on a path towards self destruction trying to hang on to someone I knew I could be but just did not know how Alcohol and drugs had created a different person within me and we would have continuous fights for the right to be me It ended up in February 2006 with us both in prison on the island of St Lucia a hard core prison I won I started to write out of sheer boredom what followed was a self therapeutic journey to the land of a reality which I had left behind a long time ago How Does it Feel? Charlotte Bosseaux,2007 Narratology is concerned with the study of narratives but surprisingly it does not usually distinguish between original and translated texts This lack of distinction is regrettable In recent years the visibility of translations and translators has become a widely discussed topic in Translation Studies yet the issue of translating a novel's point of view has remained relatively unexplored It seems crucial to ask how far a translator's choices affect the novel's point of view and whether characters or narrators come across similarly in originals and translations This book addresses exactly these questions It proposes a method by which it becomes possible to investigate how the point of view of a work of fiction is created in an original and adapted in translation It shows that there are potential problems involved in the translation of linguistic features that constitute point of view and that this has an impact on the way works are translated Now I Am Two! Jane Belk Moncure,1984-01-01 A child displays the many achievements of a two year old The Externalist Challenge Richard Schantz,2011-08-18 The debate between internalism and externalism has become a focal point of attention both in epistemology and in the philosophy of mind and language Externalism challenges basic traditional internalist conceptions of the nature of knowledge justification thought and language What is at stake is the very form that theories in epistemology and the philosophy of mind ought to take This volume is a collection of original contributions of leading international authors reflecting on the present state of the art concerning the exciting controversies between internalism and externalism The First Sketch of Merry Wives of Windsor William Shakespeare,1842 A Treatise on Differential Equations George Boole,1859
