Nuclear Madness Religion And The Psychology Of The Nuclear Age:

Nuclear Madness Ira Chernus, 1991-01-01 This book builds on Robert Jay Lifton's theory of psychic numbing and takes madness as a guiding metaphor. It shows that public perceptions of the Bomb are a kaleidoscope of ever-changing ideas and images. Recent changes in public awareness only signal new symptoms of this public madness, symptoms unwittingly fostered by the antinuclear movement. Since the newest nuclear images follow the same psychological pattern as their predecessors, they are likely to lead us deeper into nuclear madness. Chernus offers new interpretations of four major theorists in the psychology of religion: Paul Tillich, R. D. Laing, Mircea Eliade, and James Hillman, to trace the roots of nuclear madness back to the onset of modernity when the West gained technological mastery at the price of losing religious imagination and ontological security. The author develops an interpretation of Lifton's own thought as an ontological and religious psychology. Drawing on the work of Eliade and Hillman, he goes on to suggest that madness reflects a repressed desire to transform life by opening up the floodgates of imagination. A conscious cultivation of the play of imagination can lead the way through madness to sanity and peace. But imagination can only respond to the nuclear threat if it is acted out in a new brand of peace activism that blends pragmatic politics with psychological and religious transformation. Nuclear Rites Hugh Gusterson, 1996-11-29 An extremely important work. It demonstrates the power that ethnographic analysis can have when directed at an examination of our own society's central nervous system. Faye Ginsburg, author of Contested Lives, essential reading for anyone trying to understand what Cold War science was in all its cultural aspects and what this same science now in transformation might yet be. George E. Marcus, co-editor of The Traffic in Culture. Religious Studies in Ontario Harold Remus, Daniel Fraikin, William Closson James, 2006-01-01 Most Ontario universities were established by Christian denominations; a Christian ethos was assumed and pervasive, and students were required to take courses designed to teach and inculcate religion. This insightful and comprehensive study demonstrates how, as Ontario society became secularized and pluralistic, so too did universities. Today religion is again studied in university classrooms, but as religious studies, a relatively new field that reflects the religiously pluralistic nature of Ontario and the world-wide explosion of knowledge. This authoritative volume will be of interest to students of religion in and outside academic circles, to administrators of academic institutions and granting agencies, and to persons wanting to know more about the social and cultural changes that have transformed Ontario and Canadian society. Nuclear Power in Britain and Germany: Trust, Democracy, and Futures

Christian Götter, 2025-07-28 Split into two volumes, volume 2 is a cultural history of technology that provides new insights into the international history of nuclear energy by examining the perspectives of six nuclear power plant host communities in Britain and Germany from the 1950s to the late 1980s. Based upon a continuous qualitative analysis of the public debates in these communities, this book demonstrates that the societal conflicts about atomic power were never confined to the risks of one exceptional energy technology. Instead, they were shaped by larger societal issues, which they in turn heavily influenced Therefore the local discourses about nuclear energy provide an insight into transformations the British and German societies underwent during the Cold War The book will be of value for scholars and students interested in the history of technology environmental political and contemporary history as well as science and technology studies It will be of interest to researchers and members of the public interested in the local history of Biblis Hinkley Point Lingen Oldbury on Severn Stade and Torness as well as the wider public interested in the ongoing debates about nuclear power as a source of energy and a potential answer to the challenges of climate change Pilgrimage through a Burning World Ken
