The Berkeley Literary Women's Revolution Marsha

Hudson, Bridget Connelly, Doris Earnshaw, 2005 Even during the late 1960s academia remained largely the province of men That began to change at the University of California at Berkeley in 1969 when Marsha Hudson posted notices across campus proposing a feminist literary salon The purpose was to discuss women's literature a few female writers received passing notice in the classroom but the multitude was either ignored or forgotten The informal gatherings continued for years growing into an activist movement that established the first Women's Studies major at Berkeley helped produce the first major anthologies of women's poetry and fought for equality and recognition in every corner of the education system They risked their academic futures in the process but the efforts of those women and others helped change the face and shape of higher learning forever These 16 essays were written by members of Marsha's Salon and its successors the Comparative Literature Women's Caucus a group of female graduate students at UC Berkeley organized in 1969 by Marsha Hudson The group met for years and helped lead the charge to bring sexual equality to all facets of education These annotated essays recount the atmosphere of the time that made change necessary the upheaval brought about by the feminist revolution in education the direction that the movement took and the current state of feminist learning in academia An appendix features period letters and documents from group members regarding the need for changes at Berkeley as well as statistical information about women's studies and related subjects

When Women Ask the Questions Marilyn Jacoby Boxer, 2001-09-28

In When Women Ask the Questions Marilyn Boxer traces the successes and failures of women's studies examines the field's enduring impact on the world of higher education and concludes that the rise of women's studies has challenged the university in the same way that feminism has challenged society at large Drawing on her experiences as a historian feminist academic administrator and former chair of a women's studies program Boxer observes that by working for justice and for changes necessary to make the attainment of justice a practical possibility women's studies ensures that women are heard in the processes and places where knowledge is created taught and preserved The intellectual transformation behind the emergence of women's studies Boxer concludes is one of historic proportions Like other great moments in human experience it has given rise to a flowering of art literature and science and to the challenging of previously accepted authorities of text and tradition
