

held constant, and β_0 is the y -intercept. The coefficients $\beta_0, \beta_1, \dots, \beta_k$ will usually be unknown, since they represent population parameters.

General Form of the Multiple Regression Model

$$y = \beta_0 + \beta_1 x_1 + \beta_2 x_2 + \dots + \beta_k x_k + \varepsilon$$

where y is the dependent variable
 $x_1, x_2, \dots, x_k$ are the independent variables
 $E(y) = \beta_0 + \beta_1 x_1 + \beta_2 x_2 + \dots + \beta_k x_k$ is the deterministic portion of the model β_i determines the contribution of the independent variable x_i

Note: The symbols $x_1, x_2, \dots, x_k$ may represent higher-order terms. For example, x_1 might represent the current interest rate, x_2 might represent x_1^2 , and so forth.

At first glance it might appear that the regression model shown here would not allow for anything other than straight-line relationships between y and the independent variables, but this is not true. Actually, $x_1, x_2, \dots, x_k$ can be functions of variables as long as the functions do not contain unknown parameters. For example, the carbon monoxide content y of smoke emitted from a cigarette could be a function of the independent variables

$x_1 = \text{Tar content}$

$x_2 = (\text{Tar content})^2 = x_1^2$

$x_3 = 1$ if a filter cigarette, 0 if a nonfiltered cigarette

The x_2 term is called a higher-order term because it is the value of a quantitative variable (x_1) squared (i.e., raised to the second power). The x_3 term is a coded variable representing a qualitative variable (filter type). The multiple regression model is quite versatile and can be made to model many different types of response variables.

The steps we followed in developing a straight-line model are applicable to the multiple regression model.

Analyzing a Multiple Regression Model

STEP 1 Collect the sample data, i.e., the values of $y, x_1, x_2, \dots, x_k$, for each experimental unit in the sample.

STEP 2 Hypothesize the form of the model, i.e., the deterministic component, $E(y)$. This involves choosing which independent variables to include in the model.

STEP 3 Use the method of least squares to estimate the unknown parameters $\beta_0, \beta_1, \dots, \beta_k$.

STEP 4 Specify the probability distribution of the random error component ε and estimate its variance σ^2 .
